SEARCH FAILS TO FIND TRACES OF MRS. PHILLIPS

Officers Spread Dragnet In Many Sections In Hope of Making Capture

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—If Clara Phillips, convicted "hammer murderess" has made good her escape across the international boundary line into Mexico she is safe from return to this country at this time even if located.

This was the opinion expressed at the Mexican consulate here today where it was pointed out that there are no extradition laws in force now between the two countries due to the non-recognition of the Mexican government by the United States. It was also stated that California officers have no rights to search for the prisoner or attempt to bring her back after they cross the border line into Mexico.

By WILLIAM G. CAYCE
For International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 6.—Fearing that she would be the subject of revenge by Mrs. Clara Phillips, who escaped from the county jail here yesterday while under sentence for life for the "hammer murdre" of Alberta Meadows, Mrs. Peggy Caffee, "star" prosecution witness at the "tiger woman's" trial, was reported to have appealed to the sheriff's office today for protection.

Mrs. Caffee, who has been living in seclusion since the trial, in Long Beach, under the name of "Mrs. N. D. Gladson," asked that a guard be placed near her home, it is said.

"She hates me because I told the truth at her trial," Mrs. Caffee is said to have told officers, "and I'm not afraid to face her fairly in court or anywhere else, but she'll try to kill me if she gets a chance."

The fine-meshed dragnet for Mrs. Phillips was spread today from San Francisco to Ensenada, Mexico, when Under Sheriff Gene Biscailuz crossed the border at San Diego and proceeded into

At the dance December 15, music will be furnished by Kelly's Shrine Club orchestra.

Message of Approval On Musical Program

Glendale people who are serving on the Christmas carol committee of the local Community Service organization have just received a message of approval and full co-operation from C. M. Tremaine, director of the national bureau for the advancement of music, with headquarters in New York city.

Members of the local committee are Mrs. Dora L. Gibson, Mrs. Harry McMullin, Mrs. E. Brenneman, Mrs. W. Q. Widdows, who are working in co-operation with O. W. Andresen of the Kiwanis club. Mr. Tremaine writes to the committee:

"I feel certain that Glendale's efforts will do much to promote a spirit of good-will in the community as well as to advertise the city as one which is progressive along musical as well as the more material community development lines."

More Mail Delivery In Business District

Captain D. Ripley Jackson, Glendale postmaster, expects to soon increase mail delivery in the business district to three times each day, and when this is accomplished, carriers will step out earlier than at present.

In connection with this, it is timely to advise patrons that a letter from the Department intimates early enforcement of the rule requiring places of business—residences have already complied—to provide slot or receptacle for delivery of mail, says the postmaster.

FURNISHINGS OF NEW CLUB HOUSE BEING OUTLINED

Council Holds Session to Discuss Various Ways to Meet Problems

Furnishings for the Tuesday Afternoon club's new clubhouse and how to finance the furnishing plans were the mooted questions at the club council meeting last night at the home of Mrs. John Robert White at 347 North Orange street. The club council includes the club officers, curators of the sections and chairmen of committees.

With the new clubhouse nearing completion the clubwomen are facing the problems of furnishings and the council meeting last night resulted in the appointment of a general furnishing committee and in several of the sections and committee chairmen assuming the responsibility of providing certain things for the various rooms of the new club home.

Chosen Chairman

Mrs. W. E. Evans was named chairman of the general furnishing committee and she will be assisted by Mesdames C. C. Pulliam, William P. MacMullin, Harry Lockwood and H. R. Boyer. The duties of this committee are to thoroughly consider and investigate every phase of the furnishing problem, particularly the hangings and furniture; to consult with those whom they consider valuable authorities; to base final orders on the lowest bids and to as far as possible purchase furnishings in Glendale.

Make Pledges

In the enthusiasm of the discussion the curators and chairmen of various sections and committees pledged themselves and their assistants to provide certain furnishings and articles. They were the Shakespeare and Maids and Young Matrons sections, the silver; Literary section, dishes; Mrs. Lillian Dow, heading the Local Relief, Philanthropy, Juvenile Protection sections and Mesdames R. A. Puffer, H. R. Boyer, F. L. Hollingsworth and C. J. Newcomb, the linen; Membership committee, the tea set; Hospitality committee, punch bowl and glasses.

The general furnishing committee and the above named will, of course, work in co-operation with Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, chairman of the Ways and Means committee.

Plan for Sales

In planning to augment the furnishing fund Mrs. Colin Cable is to be in charge of a series of cooked food sales to be held at each regular meeting day of the club, beginning with the first meeting in January.

Another means will be the birthday march, to be held at each regular meeting day of the club, beginning next Tuesday. At that time all members having birthdays on that day or during the week will contribute as many pennies as they are old.

Scientist to Write Articles for News

Glendale numbers among its better known residents, Alfred Cookman, M. S., of 336 West Pioneer drive, a scientist and naturalist of wide study and authority, who is on record as having the largest spider collection on the Pacific coast. In addition to his spider collection, Mr. Cookman has fine collections of birds, birds' eggs and insects. At present some of his rare specimens are being shown in the window of a Los Angeles bank.

Mr. Cookman already has his bachelor and master degrees in science and he is now working toward his doctor's degree, which is to be based on a thesis on the sense organs of spiders.

Glendale is very fortunate to have Mr. Cookman as a resident and The Glendale Evening News readers are particularly fortunate for Mr. Cookman has consented to write a series of articles on spiders for The News. The first of these stories appears on another page of today's issue.

Uncle John Says--

Mary was sweepin' the front porch this morning and she come in as mad as a wet hen. "I wish to goodness they was a law against throwin' all this advertisin' matter all over the lawn and porch," she said. Before I could answer she goes on, "I don't care nothin' about programs, and these sample copies of Los Angeles papers don't interest me, neither. There must be thousands of dollars wasted for printin' this trash that is thrown around the streets and lawns and that no one ever reads." Mary was quite peeved and when she is in that mood I know enough to keep still.

HIGH SCHOOL HAS ARGUMENT OVER ANNEXATION

Pupils Debate Issue and Audience Seems to Favor City 'Staying Single'

Glendale Union High school last night decided whether or not Glendale should annext to Los Angeles.

Which way it was decided, however, will never be known for the debate was without judges and no decision was expressed by the audience which seemed to get a good deal of amusement over the idea of Glendale becoming the "tail of the dog."

According to Miss Helen Sherwood, who was the first speaker on the affirmative, annexation to Los Angeles is "absolutely necessary." She called attention to certain problems which "must be met and solved."

According to Harold Majors, second speaker on the affirmative, annexation would be of "great benefit" to Glendale at the present time. He intimated that Glendale would "go straight to the dogs" if it doesn't annex.

Forward Movement

"Whether Glendale shall continue her proud forward movement as the fastest growing city in the United States with the plaudits of the multitude ringing in her ears or whether Glendale shall consent to be peacefully absorbed by the greedy metropolis, thereby losing her identity and prestige forever and ever—that is the question to be decided," remarked Miss Isabel Tousey, first speaker of the negative.

"It is my duty to prove that Glendale shall not be annexed to Los Angeles," she continued, "because there is absolutely no justification for such an act. Just think of Glendale and her advantages—large and prosperous, full of refined people, modern equipment, flourishing business and residential districts, fine schools and many other desirable things.

"Shall we lose forever our individuality? I say 'No.' Let us keep on as we have begun, distinctive, standing out from the common throng because we have done something worth while.

"Remember our Chamber of Commerce and how they have

Literary Section of Tuesday Club Meets

Sketches of foreign travel and Christmas music and story entertained members of the Literary Section of the Tuesday Afternoon club yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert Angiel at 612 North Orange street.

Mrs. H. R. Boyer gave an interesting travelogue of the trip she and Dr. Boyer took last spring and summer. A full account of Mrs. Boyer's paper was given in last night's edition of The Evening News.

Following Mrs. Boyer, Mrs. Frankie Webb told of a trip she took to Norway and Sweden, entertaining with incidents of a visit with friends in Christiana. She told of the Norwegian and Swedish Christmas customs and also showed a collection of interesting pictures and some Hardanger embroidery, made in Hardanger, Norway. An added interest to Mrs. Webb's talk was the appearance of her little granddaughter Barbara Sawyer in Norwegian peasant costume.

The final numbers of the program were the singing of Christmas carols by Barbara and Florence Sawyer in costume, accompanied by their mother Mrs. Helen Sawyer; and the Christmas story from "Ben Hur" beautifully told by Mrs. Harry Wilcox.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. Angiel served coffee and cakes to her guests.

W. J. Clendenin Is Again Resident Here

The many Glendale friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clendenin are welcoming them back to be Glendale residents. They have bought back the home they built four years ago at 600 South Central avenue, at the corner of Chestnut street, and are ready to receive their friends there.

The Clendenins are prominent members of the First Presbyterian church and during their four years' absence have maintained their memberships in the local church.

Mr. and Mrs. Clendenin enjoyed a trip to Ireland during the summer.

"We are mighty glad to be living in Glendale again," says Mr. Clendenin. "However, we note many changes since we moved away four years ago and we hardly know the city."

Now that Glendale is interested in Christmas carols, it is particularly fitting that the program Friday afternoon of the Music Section of the Tuesday Afternoon club at the home of Mrs. Charles H. Meadows at 721 North Brand boulevard is to be featured by traditional carols of the different periods of history.

The program for the afternoon has been arranged by Mrs. Charles A. Parker and promises to be a real holiday affair.

In presenting the carols of the various periods of music in the history of the world, Mrs. John Cotton will read an original Christmas story and at intervals throughout the story a group of singers will give carols.

Those included in the group are Mrs. Edith Rogers Arnold, Mrs. Harry McMullin, Mrs. William MacMullin, Mrs. A. M. Draper, Mrs. C. L. Vierick, Mrs. John Cotton and Mrs. Charles A. Parker.

SALVATION ARMY'S DRIVE FOR FUNDS IS UNDER WAY

Every Indication That City Will Go Over Top by Tomorrow Night

The Salvation Army's drive for $5000, Glendale's quota of national funds being collected by public-spirited organizations to aid the army in carrying on its humanitarian work, will go "over the top" by tomorrow night, when the drive concludes, according to Captain D. Ripley Jackson, chairman in charge.

Captain Jackson stated this morning that while a tabulation of the funds collected, to date, has not been made, he was certain that preliminary donations and pledges will meet the amount required.

Julius Kranz, treasurer of the drive, concurred in this announcement. He stated that Colonel Everington, who made a preliminary detour of the business district before the drive officially started, collected more than $600.

Chance to Subscribe

The headquarters of the drive committee are in the offices of Mr. Kranz, 113 West Broadway. Anyone not yet approached by the army of collectors who would like to contribute to the Salvationists can do so by sending their checks to Mr. Kranz's office or to the offices of Captain Jackson in the postoffice.

Mr. Kranz said this morning that more than 200 people, divided into teams of four each, and comprising representatives of every fraternal and civic organization in the city are participating in the drive. The organizations are:

Masons, Knights of Columbus, Kiwanis, Rotary, Exchange Club, Merchants' Association, Thursday Afternoon Club, Elks, Credit Men's Association, Glendale Advancement Club, Unity Lodge and University Chapter, Chamber of Commerce, Shrine Club, American Legion and the Women's Auxiliary, South San Fernando Improvement Association, Parent-Teachers' Federation and the Spanish War Veterans.

The Knights of Pythias held their regular weekly convention at their hall at the corner of Brand boulevard and Park avenue, last evening, which proved to be one of the most interesting and enthusiastic of the year.

The rank of knight was conferred upon Esquire E. R. George.

There were several visiting brothers from lodges of sister states, among whom were Brothers Brandt, Reassor, Meissner and Standon.

The annual election of officers took place. Edward S. Melzer, V. C., was elevated to C. C.; M. J. Edward to V. C., Emil Rehberg to prelate, J. S. Long was elected M. of A., Sam Brown, M. of W., Frank E. Peters, K. of R. and S.; J. A. Spence, M. of E., and J. Wright, M. of E. J. A. Spence and Attorney G. H. King were elected delegates to the district convention.

After the initiation, election of officers and regular order of business, a banquet was served by Emil Rehberg, at which Attorney G. H. King was toastmaster.

Many speeches were made at the banquet table touching upon Pythiasism, Christmas cheer and general community civic affairs.

Glendale has many Knights of Pythias who are daily becoming affiliated with the local lodge and the members from other states who are visiting the local lodge and becoming affiliated are happily surprised to find such a body of enthusiastic members as the lodge numbers, it is declared.

Glendale Continues Its March Forward

Glendale's growth is holding its own, according to James F. McIntyre, commercial agent for the public service department. There are now 7354 water meters and 9120 electric light meters in service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Branding the proposed merger of two of the "big five" Chicago packers as a "flagrant violation of the law," Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, today charged in the senate the officials of the Armour and Morris companies were "frankly bargaining with the government for permission to do an unlawful act." PROPHETIC MESSAGE IS LEFT BY CLEMENCEAU

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—"One of these days under a form I don't exactly know, the time will come gentlemen, when we will meet again, in France." Most of those officers whom the tiger addressed commanded American combat units in France.

ADMINISTRATION PRESSES ITS SAVING PLANS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The administration policy of "save until it hurts" was emphasized today with a report from the house appropriations committee on the treasury department supply bill for the fiscal year 1923-24, the first of the new appropriation measures to make its appearance. The bill carries a total of $115,119,810, which is $2,725,018 less than the treasury appropriation for the current fiscal year, and $2,712,958 less than the amount asked by President Harding in transmitting the budget.

SIX ARMY AVIATORS DIE IN AIR COLLISION TODAY

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Dec. 6.—Six army aviators were killed here today when a Martin bombing plane carrying four enlisted men and an officer, and a Fokker plane, which had just taken off the ground, collided about 200 feet in the air. The dead: Major Guy L. Gerhardt, Captain L. A. Doyle of San Francisco, Sergeant Arthur M. Arsick of Cleveland, Private Leon Rolas of Philadelphia, Private Felix Blumka of Chicago, and Private Tom Jordan of Deep Sleep, Georgia. The Martin plane was on a practice flight with Captain Doyle and the four enlisted men aboard. It was traveling at high speed when Major Gerhardt arose from the ground in his Fokker directly in the path of the oncoming bombing plane. With a loud crash the two planes came together, both falling to the ground in flames. Private Rolas leaped from the burning Martin plane and survived only a few minutes. All the others were dead when witnesses to the collision reached the scene. An official investigation was ordered immediately.

U. S. TREASURY HEAD OPPOSES MORE TAXATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Undaunted by the expected deficit this year in government revenues, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, in his annual report to congress today declared the country should not be subjected to additional taxation. Instead of recommending new taxation to make up the deficit, Secretary Mellon advocated the lowering of sur tax rates on large incomes from the present 50 per cent to 25 per cent, contending this action would result in capital being drawn from its hiding places and thus creating new tax sources naturally. Great wealth, Mellon pointed out, now sinks itself in tax exempt securities and other tax free investment fields and yields the government nothing. If this money is released, he also pointed out, it will multiply the treasury resources. There is real denger, his report said, in the decline of taxable incomes above $300,000. "The sur taxes are gradually defeating their own purpose," his report said. "High rates are becoming ineffective because of the steady disappearance of taxable incomes to which they are intended to apply."

SCHOOL SYSTEM'S REORGANIZATION IS DISCUSSED

Representatives From Four Sections Are Present at Meeting Last Night

Reorganization of the school system and the ultimate establishment of junior high schools in Glendale, Eagle Rock, La Crescenta and Tujunga was discussed informally last night at the high school by members of the high school board of trustees and delegates from the grammar school boards of education in the high school district.

A dinner in the high school cafeteria preceded the meeting. This was served by the advanced cooking class under the direction of Miss Ellen J. Hanson, head of the domestic science department.

The menu consisted of consomme, veal "birds," mashed potatoes, peas in timbales, hot biscuits, coffee, pineapple a la Bavarian and cake. It seemed to be the source of much pleasure to those present.

Mrs. Frank Eifler, who has charge of the cafeteria, assisted in the preparation of the meal. It was served by Miss Rebecca Hodge, Miss Sarah Allen, Miss Irene Miller, Miss Elba Bowen and Miss Josephine Farnshaw.

Indorse Project

The junior high school idea was endorsed by Richardson D. White, superintendent of local grammar schools; George U. Moyse, principal of the high school, Dr. B. H. Smith, member of the school board of La Crescenta; Dr. Harry V. Brown, member of the high school board of trustees; Mrs. Arthur Brown, member of the local grammar school board of education; Dr. P. C. Lucas, member of the local grammar school board of education, and others.

Doubt was expressed by J. A. Jenkins and Mrs. Marion Reynolds, members of the Tujunga Board of Education, that the reorganization would be of any benefit to Tujunga unless it could have its own junior high school. Mr. Jenkins stated, however, that he did not see why the idea could not be worked out

Boy Scouts Start 'Achievement' Drive

Seemingly, this is an age of contests. There have been guessing contests galore, puzzle contests and contests for nearly everything under the sun, but the latest and most up-to-date contest to be launched is the "First Annual Troop Achievement Contest," in which all the Boy Scouts of the Verdugo Hills district will participate.

For many moons, it was announced this morning, local scout leaders have been assimilating and gathering information from scout centers all over the United States for just such a contest and now they believe they have a finished product. The contest is dedicated to the purpose of intensifying scouting in this district.

Arrangements for the contest were made by the troop leaders' "roundtable," and will continue to be directed by them under the auspices of the Verdugo Hills District Council, Boy Scouts of America. The contest will run in periods of four months' duration beginning December 1, 1922, and ending November 30, 1923. A special twenty-eight page booklet has been prepared giving the full details of the contest. A copy of the latter will be presented to every scout and scout leader in the district.

The Glendale business women are planning to go to Pasadena Tuesday, December 12 to attend the County Federation meeting at the Shakespeare club house, where the Pasadena club will entertain.

Heavy Storm Sweeps Over Pacific Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—The Pacific coast was swept today by the worst storm of the winter.

Snow from the Canadian line to points in Northern California was reported with a heavy gale and driving rain falling south of the snow line.

Storm warnings were displayed from Point Reyes north to Cape Flattery. The storm came from the north Pacific and was apparently one of the most severe of the season.

The high wind and lashing rain made difficult the fighting of two fires in San Francisco early today. The first destroyed the distillery and cooperage plant of the Ranier Brewing plant with a loss of $50,000. The flames were prevented spreading to the main plant by heroic work by firemen.

Scores of men, women and children were forced to flee in their night clothes out into the rain when four flats in Broadway were swept by fire. A number of thrilling rescues by firemen and policemen marked this conflagration.

TUJUNGA OUT FOR VALLEY RAILWAY

Residents Reported Laying Plans for Through Electric Service

People of Tujunga and Sunland are reported to be laying plans for reviving their effort to obtain an electric train service through the valley.

Through the efforts of Glendale, Montrose and La Crescenta, it is understood, arrangements are well under way for extending the Glendale-Montrose line to meet the Los Angeles electric line.

If present train service plans materialize, authorities on the matter claim that electric transportation from all parts of Los Angeles will be brought to a point less than three miles from Tujunga.

Mantle of Ice Is Covering Portland

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 6.—Trees and streets here are covered with a thin mantle of ice and unless the weather moderates it is likely that the the city will soon be in the throes of a silver thaw. The temperature is a few degrees below freezing. About an inch of snow fell early this morning. Eastern Oregon districts report from four to ten inches snowfall during the past twelve hours.

State Revenues In This District Gain

Facing a loss of approximately $500,000 due to cancellation of various taxes by the new Internal Revenue Act, the November receipts of the southern California district not only overcame the shrinkage of half a million dollars, but put across an increase of $75,025.62 over November, 1921, when the full battery of taxes was operative.

Telegraphic advices received yesterday from Collector Rex Goodcell, of the Los Angeles district, who is in Washington conferring with treasury officials, stated that federal tax receipts for the country as a whole for October decreased twenty-seven per cent as compared with October a year ago.

In striking contrast to the nation's showing the Los Angeles district collected $2,265,627.67 in November, 1922, as against $2,190,601.45 in November, 1921. It is not believed that the Los Angeles figures will be equaled by any other section of the United States.

Collector Goodcell also wired from Washington that income tax receipts for the nation as a whole, decreased thirty per cent in October as compared with the same month of last year. Figures compiled in the Los Angeles office show that this district developed a loss for the same period of but seven-tenths of one per cent.

Further confirmation of the claim that Los Angeles is the official business oasis of the country was presented yesterday when a completed survey of miscellaneous tax receipts for November showed a total of $1,468,694.63 as against $1,311,601.45 in November a year ago, a clear gain of twelve per cent.

It was pointed out at Collector Goodcell's office that the increase in the November miscellaneous tax receipts means more than the figures indicate. Last November $350,000 in transportation tax, $80,000 in sales and luxury tax and various other taxes running up to half a million dollars were collected. These taxes having been cancelled by the new revenue Act, the Los Angeles Internal Revenue office had to depend solely on expansion in other lines of business that were not affected by the tax reductions, to furnish sufficient increased revenue in November, 1922, to offset this $500,000 loss. Not only did the November receipts wipe out the half million shortage, but they piled up a gain of $75,000 to boot.

EXTENDS THANKS FOR RELIEF WORK

Mrs. H. E. Bartlett Expresses Appreciation for Help in Near East Drive

Expressing the real spirit of Christmas, that of giving, Glendale's consignment of clothing for the Red Cross Near East Emergency work in Greece, is ready for shipment and will leave within the next few days for Brooklyn, where it will be added to other consignments and sent overseas to Athens, Greece, for the relief of the refugees.

The fifty bulging sacks and two well filled boxes are the best evidence of Glendalians' response to the call for contributions. Two sacks are entirely filled with shoes, while the other forty-eight sacks are filled with sweaters of all sizes, overcoats, cloaks, jackets, trousers and underwear.

Express Appreciation

In expression of her appreciation for Glendale's response, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett of 333 West Broadway, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter, has issued the following statement.

"The recent clothing drive held by the local Red Cross chapter for the Near East emergency work was a success. The response was generous and a satisfactory amount of warm clothing and shoes was collected and shipped.

"Special thanks are due Superintendent R. D. White of the school board for permission to use the school houses as receiving depots. To the principals, who gave notice to the pupils, to the patriotic chairmen and others, who received the bundles; to Rev. Mottern for giving publicity to the churches and newspapers; to Roberts & Echols for the use of their building at 103 South Brand for storing and packing; to Morgan Brothers Transfer company for free collection; also to L. T. Rowley and H. E. Bartlett for collections; and to Mr. Crofton, Mr. Spohr and Roberts & Echols we are greatly indebted for boxes.

Thanks Others

"We wish to thank most heartily Mrs. C. L. Peckham, Mrs. Lillian Dow, Mrs. Fanset, Robert Rowley and H. E. Bartlett for assistance in packing the boxes and sacks.

"One and all, who gave the clothing and assisted in any way, may know that their gifts and efforts will help in a small measure to promote the comfort of many wretched persons overseas who but for the aid sent them by this country must perish.

"Acting under instructions from the National Red Cross the local chapter will gladly receive contributions of money for the Near East Relief work and forward the amounts be they small or large.

BUILDING IN VAN NUYS SHOWS GAIN

Permits Issued This Month Total More Than Ninety Thousand Dollars

Building permits issued in Van Nuys during the month of November totaled $91,115, according to figures just made available. This is by far the heaviest construction period experienced by Van Nuys this year.

The value of all permits issued to date this year total $796,524. This figure also sets a precedent for building in this community.

Permits issued this month call for the construction of the new Sylvan Hotel, fifteen dwellings, eighteen poultry houses and twenty-eight miscellaneous dwellings.

Paving Program Adopted

A resolution providing for the paving of West Vanowen street from Sherman Way to Balboa avenue, has been officially adopted by the Van Nuys city council. It is understood that proposals on the work will be asked for immediately. Actual construction is slated to start early next spring.

Glendale Woodmen to Elect Officers

Glendale camp, No. 12886, Modern Woodmen of the World, will hold an election of officers for the ensuing year Friday night. Nominations for the various offices were made at the meeting held on November 22. Keen rivalry exists for the many positions to be filled. Attorney Henry Molz, who has been clerk of the camp since its organization in June, 1921, has for several months on account of pressure of private business, been endeavoring to vacate his office. He was renominated, but declined to serve again, and nominations for this office were consequently held open until the election to give him time to reconsider. Lodge members claim the efficient services rendered by him have done much to bring the camp to its present state, ranking as it does, as one of the leaders in Glendale's fraternal life.

"I don't know what's got into Siki," Hellers said.

J. O. C. CLASS MEETS

At the regular business meeting of the J. O. C. class of the First Methodist Episcopal church, held at 8 o'clock last night in the parlor of the church, the full reports of the bazaar given November 24 were read. They show that the net profits derived from this unusually successful affair were $372.86. Mrs. Albert Starkey, who had charge of the chicken dinner which was largely responsible for this gratifying total, was presented by the members of the class with a pearl necklace, as an evidence of their appreciation of her unremitting and well-managed efforts.

Following the reading of the reports, Mrs. Maud Cunningham was appointed J. O. C. teacher for the coming term and Mrs. Vera Butterfield first vice-president.

Catholic Missionary Giving Talks Here

Most gratifying crowds are attending the meetings of the Mission now being held at the Holy Family Catholic church according to the report of Father James S. O'Neill. The Mission closes next Sunday night and those attending the evening meetings are to have the privilege of hearing an address at 8 o'clock by Father Patrick O'Reilly, one of the most prominent missionaries in the Catholic church.

Father O'Reilly came to Glendale from Portland, Ore. Previous to that time he has done missionary work in all parts of the world and has had the interesting experience of receiving special permission from the United States government to minister to the lepers on the isolated island of Molokei. He also saw service in Honolulu.

C. of C. of C. Directors Discuss Year's Plans

The directorate of the Chamber of Commerce met in closed session in the assembly rooms of the chamber last night and discussed plans relative to the drawing up of the financial budget for the coming year. Jesse Smith, recently elected president, presided. It is understood that several matters concerning the chamber were discussed, but no statement for the public was made.

The employment of secretaries will be taken up at the next meeting of the directorate, scheduled for December 12.

Bible Class Holds Session Tomorrow

The Thursday Morning Bible class for women will meet in the Presbyterian church, at the corner of East Broadway and Cedar streets, tomorrow morning, December 7, at 10 o'clock. The class held no session last week on account of the Thanksgiving holiday. The teacher, Mrs. A. L. Dennis, will be present again tomorrow and a large attendance is expected. There has long been a demand for a week day Bible class and this undenominational class is being attended by several hundred women each week. All women of Glendale are welcome.

Drive of Kindness Started by Co-Eds

EVANSTON, Ill.—Co-eds of Northwestern university have opened a "campaign of kindness" on the North Shore.

The sororities have discontinued their regular semester dances so that the money usually expended on them can be donated to charity.

Entertainment of twenty-five Chicago factory girls for an entire Saturday was the first act of kindness the girls arranged.

Theatres

The Glendale

Washington Irving's famous story, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," has been brought to the screen and is now being shown at the Glendale Theatre under the title of "The Headless Horseman," with the inimitable Will Rogers in the immortal role of Ichabod Crane, the lanky Yankee whose sentimental heart failed to stand up under the bewitching eyes of the fair Katrina Van Tassel.

All the quaint realism of this great classic, which has been as widely read as any book ever written by an American author, is preserved in this marvelous film. The supporting cast includes Lois Meredith, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Nancy Chase and a long list of other well known and capable actors.

The T. D. & L.

"The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," the great Paramount picture featuring Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy, Theodore Roberts, June Elvidge and Eva Novak, continues at the T. D. & L. Theatre.

Picturesque isles of the South Seas, England, India—all these are embraced in the peculiar plot of this unusual film. And some of the highly colorful sets vie with the natural island scenery for picturesqueness and beauty, the New York and London episodes lend the picture an unusually cosmopolitan atmosphere.

Some of the most perfect acting Meighan has ever done appears in his handling of the problem of divided affection. And Roberts, as a South Seas trader, gives a most unforgettable characterization.

CLARA PHILLIPS EVADES OFFICERS

Search Falis to Reveal Any Trace of Woman Who Escaped L. A. Jail

Lower California searching for trace of Mrs. Phillips, and Detective Sergeant Ed King proceeded to the Golden Gate city.

Meanwhile, Armour L. Phillips, husband of the fugitive, was being grilled again today concerning the sensational jail break.

According to county jail attaches today the delivery of Mrs. Phillips is the first time in the history of Los Angeles county a woman has been successful in getting out of jail. Numerous times before women have escaped from the city jail, but there was no significance attached to their getaway.

Old-timers at the jail say that Sheriff Traeger, in the attempt to re-capture Mrs. Phillips, is engaged in a battle of wits with a woman as tricky and smart and adept at taking care of herself as anyone connected with his staff. It is claimed that never before in the history of the state has a woman employed a hack saw to escape from prison.

Officers of Southland Search for Mrs. Phillips

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 6.—Hunted by every officer of the law in Southern California and federal authorities along the Mexican border, Clara Phillips, convicted "hammer murderess" of Alberta Meadows, who escaped from the county jail yesterday by sawing through the bars of her cell, was still the "enigma woman" today at the end of twenty-four hours' search after her get-away.

Although working without a single tangible clew, Sheriff W. I. Traeger and his deputies went at their task of finding Mrs. Phillips with renewed vigor today, confident that she would be found before nightfall.

Under Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, acting on a tip that Mrs. Phillips may be aboard a fast motor boat heading for Ensenda, a Lower California port, left Ti Juana early today for that point to make a search for the escaped prisoner. Deputy Sheriff Nolan was left in charge of the border patrol at Ti Juana.

Then came the fourth round. Of course there was no question in the minds of the majority of the spectators as to who would win the fight. The stranger had merely shown one of those sudden and ephemeral bursts of form that occasionally are witnessed in every branch of sport; but he couldn't last against such a man as the "white hope"—they looked for a knock-out any minute now. Nor did they look in vain.

Billy was quite satisfied with the work he had done in the preceding round. Now he would show them another style of fighting! And he did. From the tap of the gong he rushed his opponent about the ring at will. He hit him when and where he pleased. The man was absolutely helpless before him. With left and right hooks Billy rocked the "coming champion's" head from side to side. He landed upon the swelling optics of his victim as he listed.

Thrice he rushed him to the ropes, and once the man fell through them into the laps of the hooting spectators—only now they were not hooting Billy. Until the gong Billy played with his man as a cat might play with a mouse; yet not once had he landed a knock-out blow.

"Why didn't you finish him?" cried Professor Cassidy, as Billy returned to his corner after the round. "You had 'im goin' man—why in the world didn't yeh finish him?"

"I didn't want to," said Billy; "not in that round. I'm reserving the finish for the fifth round, and if you want to win some money you can take the hunch!"

"Do you mean it?" asked Cassidy.

"Sure," said Billy. "You might make more by laying that I'd make him take the count in the first minute of the round—you can place a hundred of mine on that, if you will, please."

Cassidy took the hunch, and a moment later as the two men faced each other he regretted his act, for, to his surprise, the "white hope" came up for the fifth round smiling and confident once more.

"Some one's been handin' him an earful," grumbled Cassidy, "an' it might be all he needed to take 'im through the first minute of the round, and maybe the whole round—I've seen that did lots o' times."

As the two men met the "white hope" was the aggressor. He rushed in to close quarters aiming a stinging blow at Billy's face, and then to Cassidy's chagrin and the crowd's wonder, the mucker lowered his guard and took the wallop full on the jaw. The blow seemed never to jar him the least. The "hope" swung again, and there stood Billy Byrne, like a huge bronze statue taking blow after blow that would have put an ordinary man down for the count.

The fans saw and appreciated the spectacular bravado of the act, and they went wild. Cheer on cheer rose, hoarse and deafening, to the rafters. The "white hope" lost his self-control and what little remained of his short temper, and deliberately struck Billy a foul blow, but before the referee could interfere the mucker swung another just such blow as he had missed and fallen with in the second round; but this time he did not miss—his mighty fist caught the "coming champion" on the point of the chin, lifted him off his feet and landed him halfway through the ropes. There he lay while the referee tolled off the count of ten, and as the official took Billy's hand in his and raised it aloft in signal that he had won the fight the fickle crowd cheered and screamed in a delirium of joy.

Cassidy crawled through the ropes and threw his arms around Billy.

"I knew youse could do it, kid!" he screamed. "You're as good as made now, an' you're de next champ, or I never seen one."

The following morning the sporting sheets hailed "Sailor" Byrne as the greatest "white hope" of them all. Flashlights of him filled a quarter of a page. There were interviews with him. Interviews with the man he defeated. Interviews with Cassidy. Interviews with the referee. Interviews with everybody, and all were agreed that he was the most likely heavy since Jeffries. Corbett admitted that, while in his prime he could doubtless have bested the new wonder, he would have found him a tough customer.

Everyone said that Byrne's future was assured. There was not a man in sight who could touch him, and none who had seen him fight the night before but would have staked his last dollar on him in a mill with the black champion.

Cassidy wired a challenge to the Negro's manager, and received an answer that was most favorable. The terms were, as usual, rather one-sided but Cassidy accepted them, and it seemed before noon that a fight was assured.

Billy was more nearly happy again than he had been since the day he had renounced Barbara Harding to the man he thought she loved. He read and re-read the accounts in the papers, and then searching for more references to himself off the sporting page he ran upon the very name that had been constantly in his thoughts for all these months—Harding.

Persistent rumor has it that the engagement of the beautiful Miss Harding to Wm. J. Mallory has been broken. Miss Harding could not be seen at her father's home up to a late hour last night. Mr. Mallory refused to discuss the matter, but would not deny the rumor.

There was more, but that was all that Billy Byrne read. The paper dropped from his hand. Battles and championships faded from his thoughts. He sat with his eyes bent upon the floor, and his mind was thousands of miles away across the broad Pacific upon a little island in the midst of a turbulent stream.

Daily News Letter

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers at Home and Abroad.

TODAY—Harry R. Flory, Chicago correspondent, contributes an article devoted to two new expeditions into Africa. W. D. Boyce, publisher, makes the declaration that "Africa was the underlying cause of the World War."

TOMORROW—Ellis H. Martin, correspondent at San Francisco, writes of the revival of Chinese drama in the Pacific Coast metropolis.

By HARRY R. FLORY
For International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6—Circumnavigation of Africa and penetration into the very heart of the "Dark Continent," including regions which only two white persons—Stanley and Livingston, the great explorers—have ever seen, are the goals of two exploring expeditions which recently left Chicago.

W. D. Boyce, the publisher, is the leader of one party. Dr. Richard B. Wetherill, retired surgeon and globe trotter, of Lafayette, Ind., and Thomas Duncan, Lafayette manufacturer, have inaugurated the other expedition.

Boyce expects to utilize the material he collects in writing a book, treating the whole of Africa comprehensively in one volume. Wetherill and Duncan expect to make an anthropological study of the head hunters and natives of Central Africa.

While Boyce's chief forays into the interior will be made from the west coast, he having previously explored other sections, he intends to visit all the coast countries of the continent.

A "Balloonagraph Expedition" into Africa in 1909 and 1910 first won fame for Boyce as an explorer. From two balloons, the first and last ever taken into the jungles, he took aerial photographs of wild animals and native life. Big game hunting also occupied part of his time on that trip.

"Africa was the underlying cause of the World War," said Boyce, in outlining the reasons which prompted him to make this trip. "I have a notion also that it will prove to be the underlying cause of some future wars. At any rate, it becomes increasingly important as European nations press their claims and concessions there.

"France in Africa is greater in territory and population than is France in Europe, and you could lose England in the British territory in Africa, and it would be as difficult to find it again as the proverbial needle in a haystack.

"The Turkish influence in North Africa is increasing, and that may be indicative of profoundly important developments."

Incidentally Boyce will renew his previous acquaintances with big game, although that is not the primary object of the trip. He may interview savage chiefs through the aid of a dragoman, or interpreter, but chiefly he will "look in" on every country of the continent. The trip will require from six months to a year.

When Boyce's book on Africa is completed he will have covered all the countries south of the equator and in the equatorial region of the world in his various books of travel.

Stanley and Livingston are the only white men who have ever traveled the route laid out for themselves by Dr. Wetherill and Duncan.

From Port Said, Egypt, the adventurers will proceed down the Nile to Cairo and thence to Assuan. At Rajeb they will be met by their party of native guides and servants, fifty-five in number, and proceed on a safari (journey on foot) southward. They will pass through many miles of jungle country infested by wild beasts and cannibals.

The travelers will have abundant food supplies, hunting paraphernalia and photographic equipment. They expect to penetrate the Belgian Congo, then move far southward to Zanzibar. From there they will go on southward until they reach the diamond fields, the Kaffir country and Cape Town.

It was with great difficulty that they arranged with the British and Belgian governments to visit parts of Africa where uprisings are brewing.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— By Howard R. Garis —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PEETIE'S PENNY

Uncle Wiggily was hopping along through the woods one day, not far from his hollow stump bungalow, when he met Peetie Bow Wow, the little puppy dog boy, who was a brother of Jackie Bow Wow.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Look what I got!" cried Peetie, as he frisked around the bunny gentleman.

"Good gracious, sakes alive and some peanut lollypops!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "I hope you have not got the measles or mumps, Peetie!"

"Oh, no! Nothing like that!" laughed the doggie boy. "See, I got a penny."

"Where did you got it? Oh, I mean where did you get it?" asked Uncle Wiggily, quickly correcting his mistake.

"My mother gave it to me," answered Peetie. "I'm going to take it to the hollow stump school with me and then I'm going to take it out and——"

"Oh, don't take your penny out in school, or the lady mouse teacher may take it away from you and keep you in!" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"I wasn't going to take my penny out in school," explained Peetie. "I'm going to take it out at recess and buy a piece of candy, and I'll give my brother Jackie some."

"That's a good doggie!" said Uncle Wiggily, and just then along came scampering Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy.

"Hello, Johnnie," barked Jackie as he frisked around the squirrel chap, patting Johnnie with his doggie paws. "Oh, what nice, thick, soft fur you have!" barked Peetie. "What makes Johnnie's fur so thick?" asked the doggie chap of Uncle Wiggily.

"Because it is winter and cold weather," answered the rabbit gentleman. "Your hair grows thicker in winter than in summer. It grows that way to keep you warm. And the fur of squirrels and rabbits, as well as the fur of all other animals wearing it, grows thicker in winter to keep them warm."

"Oh!" said Peetie. "Well you have lovely soft fur, Johnnie." And Peetie stroked it up and down until Johnnie laughed and cried.

"Stop, Peetie, you're tickling me!"

Then the doggie and the squirrel chap ran on to school together, while Uncle Wiggily hopped along by himself to see if he could find an adventure. But not one could he find, except that he saw Aunt Lettie, the goat lady, trying to climb up hill. The hill was slippery with snow and ice, and every time Aunt Lettie took one step up the hill she slipped back two steps.

"At this rate it will take me a year to get home!" bleated the goat lady.

"I'll help you," said Uncle Wiggily. So he got some sawdust from the ice cave of Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear gentleman, and when the sawdust was sprinkled on the icy hill Aunt Lettie easily walked up.

"Well, that was a little two-for-a-penny adventure!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, as, once more, he hopped along. "And speaking of pennies, reminds me that I think I'll stop and see what Peetie buys with his recess penny."

When Uncle Wiggily reached the hollow stump school, just before recess, the bunny gentleman found everything in great confusion. The lady mouse teacher and all the boy and girl animal pupils were searching around on the floor and up and down the aisles of desks.

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "Did the Fox or Wolf get in and hide, and are you trying to find him?"

"No," answered the lady mouse teacher. "Peetie Bow Wow has lost his recess penny and we are all trying to help him find it."

"You remember my recess penny, don't you, Uncle Wiggily?" whined Peetie, almost crying. "I had it when I met you and you didn't take it away in fun and hide it in your pocket, did you, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Peetie, thinking perhaps the bunny had played a joke.

"No, indeed, I wouldn't do such a thing," exclaimed Mr. Longears. "I saw you have your penny in your paw and then we met Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel, and you rubbed his thick fur and—"

Uncle Wiggily suddenly stopped talking and looked at the squirrel boy.

"Johnnie, come here, please," asked Uncle Wiggily. And when Johnnie had scampered close to the rabbit gentleman, Uncle Wiggily ran one paw down through the thick, winter fur on Johnnie's back.

"There it is!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "I have found your penny, Peetie." And with that Uncle Wiggily held up the penny in his paw.

"Oh, where was it?" barked Peetie in delight.

"Nestled down in Johnnie's thick fur!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "When you stroked the squirrel's fur, Peetie, you had your penny in your paws, and, in some way, the copper money caught in the thick tangle of Johnnie's fur and it's been there ever since."

"I thought I felt something funny in my fur!" chattered Johnnie, "but I was thinking maybe it was a chestnut. Anyhow, I'm glad you found your penny, Peetie! I wish I could find one!"

"So do we!" echoed the other animal children. And then Uncle Wiggily smiled at the lady mouse teacher, and gave each boy and girl animal a penny to spend at recess—that is, all but Peetie, who had a penny of his own.

So they all had a good time in the hollow stump school, and if the teaspoon doesn't go swimming in the condensed milk when the sugar bowl is playing tag in the salt cellar, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Lulu's corn cakes.

APPARATUS AND DEVICES

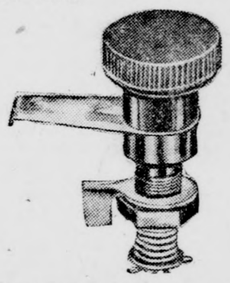
By RALPH BROWN, RADIO ENGINEER

ROTARY LEVER SWITCHES

Almost every radio experimenter makes more or less of his own apparatus, at least he assembles a large part of it. If his finished set is to appear right and work smoothly, the parts entering into its construction must be of a high degree of accuracy and uniformity.

A switch would appear at first glance to be a comparatively small item of consideration, but a poor switch or irregular contacts may ruin an otherwise well built set.

The illustration shows a switch that is designed for panel mounting, and is so constructed that results and permanent efficiency are assured. As illustrated, the coil spring tension insures suffiiient flexibility for smooth operation.



When assembling the coil spring should be drawn as tight as possible, this places the bearing strain on the face of the panel and not on the shaft.

RADIO EXPLAINED

By LIEUT. JOHN R. IRWIN
INSTRUCTOR U. S. AIR SERVICE

THE LEAD PLATE STORAGE BATTERY

In the lead cell type of battery the plates are made of lead in the form of a grid. Each plate contains many tiny cells, like honeycomb, often called by the name "grid." Into these honeycombed cells is heavily pressed or forced a mixture of red lead, litharge and sulphuric acid. When two plates thus prepared are immersed in an electrolyte, conissting of a 20 per cent sulphuric acid solution, and an electric current passes between them hydrogen will accumulate on the plate from which the current leaves the cell. Thus in one plate the active material is reduced to a spongy lead and in the other the same material is being changed to lead peroxide, as it takes up the oxygen. The cell now contains a lead peroxide plate, called the positive (-|-) and a spony lead plate called the negative (—).

After the charge is cut off, assuming that it is fully charged, if the cell is in a circuit a current will flow in the opposite direction to that by which it was charged. The cell upon completion of the full charge should show a voltage on open circuit of approximately 2.2 volts; this, however, will drop quickly to about 2 volts. As the battery is discharged the voltage will gradually fall. The discharge should never be carried below 1.75 volts.

The container of a lead cell must be of a material sulphuric acid will not attack and is usually of either glass or hard rubber, depending upon whether it is of the portable or stationary type.

The negative plates appear gray and the positive reddish in color.

No Nature Lovers In Prison, Claim

CHICAGO — Not a solitary dyed-in-the-wool fisherman or nature lover is ever found behind prison bars.

So declared the Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's Pulpit, at a recent meeting of the Izaak Walton club.

"Bad men have no love for the out-of-doors," he said. "They can't stand to be alone with themselves. Statistics show that not one of the major criminals of today liked to fish, loved a dog or smoked a pipe."

Mt. Everett is only about 29,000 feet high, but the sea off the Ladrone islands is 31,620 feet deep.

Roomer, Fumigated, Has No Ill Effects

YORKVILLE, Ohio—The fire department was called to the home of Sam Papich, where smoke was seen pouring from a room. The volunteer firemen broke down the locked door, finding a roomer in bed, with three formaldehyde candles—such as are used for fumigating—burning in the place. The roomer was carried out, none the worse for the peculiar accident.

The first gold to arrive in Canada since the signing of the armistice has been received from New York. Formal announcement was made by the New York Trust company that it had shipped $500,000 in gold to the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Ralph De Palma In Jail for Speeding

MADERA, Cal., Dec. 6.—Ralph De Palma, veteran automobile racing driver, after spending his first night in the county jail here, said "Jail life was not so bad" today. De Palma is serving a ten-day sentence imposed by Justice R. G. Cornell of Chowchilla for hitting up a 70-mile-an-hour clip on the county highway. He was given two stays to enable him to complete his racing season and then reported to begin his "bit."

Four Injured When Train Smashes Auto

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 6.—Four persons who sustained injuries last night when a Guthrie interurban crashed into a touring car, resulting in the death of five gypsies, were in the hospital recovering from slight injuries this morning. The force of the crash was so great that the car was torn up and the interurban car derailed. Pete Yanko, a gypsy, was decapitated. The rest of the party were members of his family.

Two Fortunes Are Left to Mechanic

REDDING, Calif., Dec. 6.—Elwell Llewelyn, a truck driver of Trinity Center, received by the same mail notice that he had inherited two large fortunes in England, one through the death of his mother and another by the legacy of an uncle dying two weeks later.

Llewelyn left for San Francisco today to take initial steps to claim his fortunes, the exact amount of which he had not yet been informed.

IT'S NEURITIS! Not Rheumatism
That sharp, stabbing pain in the upper arm, about the shoulder blade, in the nape of the neck, along the forearm or down the thigh and leg, is often Neuritis—not Rheumatism.
If you have severe frontal headache with a feeling that something is twitching or pulling at the eyeballs—a dull, aching pain in the back, accompanied by an occasional shooting pain in the side — numbness or tingling in the fingers or "stitches" of pain here and there, the chances are that your trouble is Neuritis.
No matter where your pain is located, you can get prompt relief without taking bromides, narcotics or other dope. Just apply Tysmol over the part that hurts, and in a few minutes you will be rid of the torture. Tysmol is guaranteed harmless. It helps to soothe and heal the weak, inflamed nerves.
Don't suffer any longer. Get a $1 package of Tysmol Tablets from Roberts & Echols. Tysmol Co., Mfg. Chemists, 400 Sutter Street, San Francisco.—Advertisement.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

QUITE AS TRYING

Self-pity is a fault that I have had a great deal to say against.

And nothing is harded to stand in a child than the habit of whining.

And nothing is harder to stand in a grown-up than the habit of mental whining—which self-pity is.

But it occurred to me the other day when I heard a woman carelessly speak of another woman as a terrible self pitier, that there is another side to the case.

All Sympathy Selfish

The woman who was thus pigeonholed and catalogued as unworthy of sympathy, doesn't seem to me to be a self-pitier at all. She has a great deal to put up with and I think she has more courage and cheerfulness than nine out of ten people would have in the circumstances. Unquestionably a good deal more than the woman who criticised her would have!

But the woman who criticised her is one of those people who don't like to have their sympathies appealed to. Someone had spoken sympathetically of the other woman, and she promptly discounted the other's claim to sympathy by alleging that she was a selfpitier.

Queer how people do hate to be asked to give sympathy! Sometimes it seems as if they minded it almost as much as giving money. Sympathy is the opposite of advice, being something everyone wishes to give.

So Simple!

Many people have a habit of protective thinking whereby they throw out of their minds any facts that, if accepted, would lay claim to their sympathy. I have heard people like this declare that nobody really needed to be poor, that poverty was always a result of laziness or criminality. . . .

Now self-pity is a phrase that this class of people cottons to very readily—to describe the other person, of course. And they apply it in season and out.

No matter how heavy the other person's burdens and troubles and discouragements, any mention of them, any appearance of being overborne by them, is self-pity.

That's Different!

Their own discouragements—ah, that's another matter. No one understands their position and how much they have to stand. They aren't pitying themselves when they speak of such things they are simply stating facts.

Yes, self-pity is a very disagreeable fault, and very hard to stand. But the habit of imputing self-pity to everyone who craves a little natural sympathy for hardships or discouragements is also a very disagreeable fault and very hard to stand.

Dean Against 'Jazz' Music In College

NORMAN, Okla.—"Jazz is to music just what slang is to English."

This is the opinion of Miss Ethel Lyons, Dean of Women, at the University of Oklahoma.

Exterior influences of college life are fully as imported as actual classroom technique and environment, in moulding America's future men and women, according to Miss Lyons.

"I believe that jazz has a positively harmful influence upon youthful university students," Miss Lyons continued.

"The purpose of the university is to educate the taste as much as to provide technical training. Certainly a taste for music should be developed, and jazz is only music by courtesy, in my opinion.

"The men and women who come to the universities will determine the standards of taste and culture of their respective comsible to give."

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.
Author of "Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories"

DIABETES—No. III.

If you have diabetes you should be under the care of a physician who will make a special study of your case. The treatment—aside from the new insulin treatment which not all can avail themselves of at present—is strictly by diet and exercise.

There are many things of interest and value for everyone to know about diabetes so I shall tell you a few of them today to end this series. And if it should happen that you are temporarily where you cannot consult a reputable physician and you suspect that you have diabetes, this article will help you.

Diabetes usually begins insidiously and pursues a chronic course. As I have said often and shall repeat, Joslin says that nearly 75 per cent of his diabetic cases begin by over-eating (especially of sweets.) And this over-eating probably acts by overloading the system with toxins and undermining the resistance of the intestinal tract, so that the always-present intestinal bacteria cause a chronic infection which ascends to the pancreas. Or the toxins themselves may act directly on the pancreas.

The most prominent symptoms are the frequent excretion of an abnormally large amount of urine containing sugar, excessive thirst, and loss of weight. There is an abnormal thirst because the system must produce enough urine to dissolve the sugar and thus remove it from the body.

The sugar lost in the urine during the day varies from a trace to two pounds. Sugar in the urine is merely a symptom of the disease.

In the treatment of diabetes, Kellogg lays great stress upon clearing up the intestinal infection. He says that the colon must be kept empty by securing three full evacuations of the bowels daily, and recommends agar-agar, or a bran from which the starch has been removed, or paraffin oils for this purpose, and if necessary warm water enemas.

For the diet all authorities agree on a marked lowering of the sugars and starches, because it is the sugars and starches that the system cannot take care of. Kellogg advises the elimination of meats and fish of all sorts. Other authorities allow them.

Over twenty years ago Guelpa of Paris was the first to discover that when a diabetic patient was made to fast for two or three days the sugar disappeared from the urine. The fast is now an accepted part of the treatment, and short fasts repeated at intervals of a week or two will keep the system of the patient so that he can tolerate more carbohydrates.

In general, the best food for diabetics are nuts (if they are thoroughly masticated), and legumes—peas, beans, lentils, soy beans—and green vegetables. Kellogg says that green vegetables must always constitute the diet of the diabetic, for they supply a liberal amount of the alkaline salts which help to neutralize the acids formed in this disease. The green vegetables furnish the bulk with practically no starch and very little food value. They are also rich in lime and iron and vitamins.

Joslin also lays considerable stress upon exercises as well as diet, for if the muscles are kept in condition there is a better utilization of the sugar. He says it is better to discuss how far you have walked than how little you have eaten. And that no case should be considered too far advanced for an attempt at muscular redevelopment. Frequent rests, however, are essential, and nine hours of sleep at least.

Heavy responsibilities and emotional excitements have to be avoided. A "Diab" cannot allow himself the luxury of getting angry for it aggravates his disease. And what is worse, his wife can't get angry at him either. Hard lines.

Let's not get diabetes nor allow our husbands to get it.

Practical Housekeeping

FOODS TO KEEP WARM

When the chilly winds are blowing, we can be much more comfortable physically, if we are careful in selecting the right kind of food.

Food is to the body as coal is to the furnace, but this fact means little or nothing to the average mother.

Those who keep warm when the thermometer hovers near zero are not swathed in heavy flannels, muffled with scarfs and burdened with furs. They are those whose rosy cheeks, bright eyes and springing steps denote correct feeding and adequate digestion. Right feeding in winter does not concern itself with quantity, but rather furnishes a sufficient amount of nourishment with a minimum of waste. The individual who eats too much cannot utilize the large amount, and it is passed off, partly digested, as waste from the skin, kidneys and bowels. This overexerts the waste channels and much of the energy gained is used in eliminating "food clinkers." Thereby the vitality is lowered and the individual becomes "run down," and is subject to colds, "flu" and indigestion.

Fuel foods are meats, starches, sweets and fats. It is poor economy to go without meat, for health is more important than butcher's bills. Meat consists mostly of protein, and, as this is a compact and easily digested form of building material, it is primarily valuable as a former of tissue. The digestion of meat begins immediately on reaching the stomach. The cells of which it is constituted are broken down, and the burning, or oxidation, liberates heat. For this reason meat may be termed a quick fuel. As meat contains stimulating properties it accelerates the body functions and quickens the assimilation of all other foods.

Like all other foods, meat should be used with discretion, an overamount being as detrimental as none at all. In the winter diet a safe rule to follow is to serve meat or fish at one meal with a dish of eggs, fish, nuts, or cheese or any other protein for the main course at the other meals. Starches and sweets are entirely fuel or acticity foods, their only mission being to create quick energy. Starch in the diet is as kindling to a fire; it produces a quick heat, then burns itself out.

The term "starches and sweets" include all cereals, potatoes, macaroni, rice, starchy vegetables, white bread, muffins and biscuits, cakes, puddings, pastry, candy and cookies.

The third fuel food is fat. It is unlike starch because it produces a lasting or latent heat. Fat is latent or reserve heat, because the time consumed in digesting it is longer than that of any other food. In fact, if the diet is well balanced the heat resulting from the fat is not altogether used in every-day living, but is stored, in the form of reserve force, against the wearying sickness of stress. The term "fats" include bacon, salt pork, sausages, olive and peanut oils, butter, cream, fat ham, peanut butter and all kinds of fish put up in oil.

Mince pie, sausages, griddle cakes, roast pork, oatmeal, doughnuts, pork and beans and plum and suet puddings all have a certain niche in the winter menu, but they must be used in proper combination. Sausage is a fuel food, for example, and should not be used in a menu otherwise replete with fat. When used properly sausages should appear in a dinner menu of the following type: Chicken boullion, sausages and mashed potatoes, bread and butter, celery and baked custard. In this menu the only additional fat is butter, while the eggs of the custard supplement the deficient protein or meat.

'Dead Sergeant' Is Considerably Alive

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Knocked out by the concussion of a shell that killed every other man about him, reported dead, disinterred and reburied, even awarded a grave number and a government death certificate, Sergeant John J. Ryan, U. S. A., bobbed up here today very much alive.

Erroneous reports of death were not infrequent in the days of the world war, but to have the government still insist, four years afterward, that one is still dead and that one's body is turning into dust in grave No. 128 in cemetery 1232, in the Argonne, is a case probably without parallel, Ryan believes.

Up to September 16, Montreal elevators had unloaded 93,881,325 bushels of grain from lake vessels, and had at the same time loaded ocean vessels with 88,849,941 bushels, according to records of the harbor commissioner's office.

London Movie Stars Resent U. S. Players

LONDON.—London is rapidly becoming a suburb of Los Angeles, and the British film world, in no uncertain manner, is telling the public that it doesn't like having its jobs grabbed by American "stars."

Unemployed American film actresses, actors, producers, photographers, scenario writers, publicity experts, scene shifters—in fact, the whole miscellaneous collection of workers connected with the movies—are coming across the Atlantic in increasing numbers. The British film industry, however, is in distress on account of unemployment.

British players protest that the Americans make themselves ridiculous trying to adopt a natural British pose when acting.

More than 5,000,000 persons in the United States alone derive their incomes, in whole or in part, from "tips," or gratuities.

BEAUTY CHATS

by Edna Kent Forbes

CHOICE OF SOAPS

A recent Beauty Chat on soaps has brought me half a dozen requests for more information. Most women prefer perfumed soaps and hate to give them up even though a plain soap is just as cleansing and much cheaper. Personally, I should say that the most useless place for perfume is in a soap, for when the skin is rinsed, if the rinsing is done properly, there will be no scent left. If using perfumed soap is a pleasure, it is the most transient of pleasures.

The test of a good soap is the lather it makes, but no soap can be expected to lather in hard water. Every bathroom should contain a bottle of ammonia, either the plain kitchen or the perfumed toilet ammonia, so that a few drops of this can be added to every basinful of water. A quarter of a teaspoonful of powdered borax will do as well.

For general efficiency there is nothing that, to my mind, excels castile soap. I purchase this generally in long bars of two or three pounds each, and take either the green or the white variety. Then I cut the bar into two-inch slices and set these away in a warm closet with a tiny air space between each slice. They last much longer this way, for the soap bought in bars is always soft and uses up quickly. By purchasing quantities of castile soap in the sales it costs me very little.

If castile is too expensive buy white curd soap, which is very cheap, pure, and which contains only a small proportion of caustic. If you buy this in bars it can be cut up and treated like castile. If you want a soap that is particularly good for bleaching buy a white curd or white castile and melt it and add very thick cooked oatmeal in the proportion of one-fifth oatmeal to four-fifths of soap.

William H. D.—Sanitary files may be purchased at most drug stores or at the toilet counters of the department stores. After bathing the feet, and while the skin is still moist, gently use one of these files over the hardened portions of the corns. Never continue this filing to the point of soreness, as this treatment may be repeated as often as there is need for it; and, with most corns, this is all the attention they require. Rub olive oil or vinegar into the corns that are very hard or painful.

Tomorrow—A Letter From a Man

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Says Farmers Save Little During Life

CHICAGO—The farmer of today has on an average just $186 left at the end of the year to pay for education, doctor bills, recreation, repairs and other incidentals, President J. R. Howard of the American Farm Bureau Federation declared to the United Press.

"This is the third successive year when the farmer faced a market returning prices below the cost of production," Mr. Howard said.

"Organized business must get behind a prostrate agriculture and aid it to reach a position of prosperity before a period of normalcy is restored.

"The income of the six and one-half million farmers in the country totaled $10,976,000,000, according to the latest survey.

"The farmer borrows approximately $12,500,000,000 on his aggregate capital of $78,000,000,000. The interest amounts to more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

"The farmer pays about $663,000,000 in taxes and $1,103,000,000 for transportation.

"This means at the end of the year he has just $186 left for the expenses named.

"The result is that the farmer must get cost of production over a number of years or go out of business."

Trace Women's Row by Hanks of Hair

LONDON—Giving evidence in the Shoreditch county court, Constable Marks said that he was called to a house after a row between two women, and he followed the trail of hanks of hair to the rooms where the brawlers had hidden.

Cupid Is Barred In Old Kansas College

LINDSBORG, Kan. — Bethany college is not a lovers' paradise, nor is it a matrimonial bureau, and gay young Lotharios will have to hie themselves to some region other than around classrooms and dormitories to pour forth their sentiments to beautiful co-eds.

This was the gist of an admonition to students of the university during chapel exercises recently by President Ernst Philblad.

A short time later Dr. Philblad announced: "We will sing song No. 24" One glance at No. 24 and then: "No, we'll sing the Doxology."

Here are the first two lines of No. 24:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love!"

Dr. Philblad had previously remarked that young men and women of the college were spending too much time in each other's company and not enough with their books.

Wife Too Eager to Wed Gets Surprise

AKRON, Ohio—Because he discovered that the woman had given false testimony, Judge H. C. Spicer has revoked the divorce decree he granted to Mrs. Genevieve Gladwell. Thomas Gladwell, the husband, lives in Wilsonburg, W. Va. She accused him with running with other women and said she intended to live with her sister after the divorce and never marry again.

She was found in the marriage license bureau with Jesse C. Henthorn, a year her junior, waiting for a license, when she was invited to appear before Judge Spicer again. There she was told that the divorce had been wiped off the docket and that she was still Gladwell's legal spouse.

SPORTS CHATTER

By BILL UNMACK
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

While many eastern colleges have gone on record as against intersectional games which require trips to the Pacific coast, there are, however, various colleges who will always be found willing to compete with the colleges on the Pacafic coast.

These sectional football games date as far back as 1899. In that year Carlisle came to the coast and defeated the University of California team 2 to 0 at San Francisco before an audience of more than ten thousand spectators, which, at that time, was considerable of a crowd for a game on the Pacific coast. Since that date innumerable such intersectional contests have been played.

From 1899 to 1908, inclusive, including the Carlisle vs. California game, four games were played as follows: Michigan defeated Stanford at Pasadena 47 to 0 in 1902; Washington State college defeated St. Louis university at Spokane 11 to 0 at Spokane in 1907, and the next year the same St. Louis college team lost to the Multnomah Athletic club at Portland, Ore., 11 to 6.

The year 1915 really started the big feature of the intersectional games, and since then with the exception of 1918 such games have been played every year, with some years having two eastern colleges travel to the coast. In 1915 no less than four of these intersectional games were played. Oregon Aggies, in this instance, went east to Lansing, Mich., where the coast men defeated the Michigan Aggies. Syracuse and Montana Aggies, Syracuse and at Missoula, Mont., and Syracuse then came out to the coast and defeated the Oregon Aggies at Portland, Ore., 28 to 0, and a week later the same Syracuse team at Los Angeles defeated Occidental college.

Since that time Brown, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Dartmouth, Ohio State and Washington and Jefferson have all played games at Pasadena or elsewhere on the coast, most of them in the event that has now become a "classic" on the coast the annual January first game at Pasadena.

The present 1922 season will see two intersectional games. Pittsburg is to play the Stanford varsity team at the new Stanford bowl on December 30 and two days later the Penn State team is to play one of the coast college teams. The University of California is the Conference champion. Unfortunately, the California officials have ruled against the varsity participating in the intersectional games this year. They have represented the coast two years in succession against Ohio State January 1, 1921, and against W. & J., 1922. This means that the best team on the coast will not represent the west this year.

Of the sixteen games that have been played under the title of intersectional contests it is interesting to note that eastern teams have won eight to seven wins by western teams and the game last January resulted in a scoreless tie between W. & J. and California. The eastern teams have scored a total of 215 points while the far western aggregations have netted 147 points.

Sammy Hale Sold to Philly Athletics

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 6.—Sammy Hale, third baseman, has been purchased by Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics from the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league, it was announced here today.

The consideration is said to have been $75,000 cash, although this price was not confirmed.

The WORLD OVER

By FRANKLIN B. MORSE.
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

As far as billiards are concerned, Willie Hoppe has demonstrated the fact that they can "come back." After losing his title of world's champion 18.2 balk line champion to Jake Schaefer on November 23, 1921, Hoppe regained his lost laurels in just a year lacking two days. Prior to winning it a few days ago, Hoppe had a chance at the title last March, but Schaefer managed to pull the laurels out of the fire and retained them.

As far as Hoppe is concerned, whether he remain champion or again loses the title, as he will eventually, of course, there is little question that the majority of cue experts accord to him the credit of being about the best player of all time on the green baize covered table. There have been few men, even among the best of them, who have shown the wizardry of Hoppe. "He talks to the balls, and they do exactly as he tells them," is the way his playing has been described.

When a close study of Hoppe's methods is made and when these methods are compared with those employed by others who have sought to strip him of the laurels he has just regained and which he has worn so gracefully in fifteen of the last sixteen years, the answer seems simple enough. It is practice—close application to conscientious practice. It will surprise many to learn that even when he is playing during the height of the billiard season, he takes a couple of hours practice on the side.

Hoppe always has contended that his day was not finished and that he would regain the title sooner or later, and there were many who agreed with him. His defeat last year he considered as merely one of the hazards and chances of the game. He is still a young man—under 35 years of age, and there is no reason why his eye should not be keen for many years yet to come. That he has not begun deterioration is pretty self evident.

Hoppe makes billiard playing his profession and he argues that men in other professions work seven or eight hours a day, and therefor there is no reason why he should not do the same thing. In other words, he takes these hours at practice. Few men have been greater students of the game. Whenever he misses a shot, he takes a mental note of the position of the balls prior to trying the shot. He then places the balls as nearly as possible in the original positions, and then goes after them until he has mastered the proper execution.

The champion also is aware of the fact that one can get too much of anything, and for this reason, there are times during the year when he does not have a cue in his hands and does not go where he will even see anything appertaining to the game. In this way he prevents himself from getting stale.

Coach Yost Not to Desert Wolverines

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Coach Yost, who has made perhaps the best showing of his career with the Michigan football eleven this year, denies that he will not coach the Wolverines next year. Stories of the coming departure of the "grand old man" of Wolverine football from the game have been flying about ever since this year's team showed class.

"I have been saying for some time that I am going to quit when I can get a coaching crew here that can handle the situation," said Yost. "That may be today, tomorrow, or two years from now. I have plenty of work to do in the athletic office and when I'm satisfied Michigan's coaching staff is ready I'll leave the active work."

BASEBALL MEET IS DULL AFFAIR

Annual Convention Results Only In Widening of Leagues' Breach

By DAVIS J. WALSH
For International News Service.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 6. — Without exception, the dullest and most trivial meeting in the history of baseball will be brought to a virtual conclusion late today when most of the loose ends contiguous to the annual convention of the national association of professional baseball clubs will be gathered up. The annual banquet, scheduled for tonight, and a handicap golf tournament to be held tomorrow with a business session or two, remain on the program, but these are of slight moment.

Most of the representatives will go their respective ways secure in the knowledge that little has been accomplished beyond a widening of the breach between the major and minor leagues.

May Produce Punch

In this connection, it had been expected that Al Tearney, president of the Three I, and Western leagues might have had something sour to say this afternoon upon a proposed amendment to the major and minor league agreement. His remarks, if any, promised to introduce an element of interest into an otherwise punchless occasion, but it is now known that the subject of his intended discourse is hardly likely to come up for consideration here.

The controversy surrounds the proposed amendment, whereby the major leagues will increase their player limit to fifty men in the off-season and their optional list from eight to twenty-five men. The minors realize that such an amendment would give the big leagues control of a great many ball players and, strange to relate, they are not particularly enamored of the idea.

However, we are informed that nothing will be done about it until the amendment is passed by the joint meeting of the major leagues, scheduled for December 14. After that the lid will be off and the sky the limit, the minors declare.

Few Deals Put Over

Although the majority of the few deals consummated to date have been put through by the minors, there is a possibility that a few big league trades may be swung before nightfall. Miller Huggins, looking quite fit after his recent operations, assured the writer early today that he had virtually closed the proposed deal with Vernon whereby Jack May, left-handed and not such a bad fellow at that, would become the exclusive property of the Yankees. Huggins has another conference on with Bill Essick, the Vernon manager, and expects to end the terrible suspense forthwith.

Although Duffy Lewis, William H. McCarthy and other coast leaguers are as one in declaring that May would win twenty-five games for the Yankees the reported price of $75,000 is just hokum. At that, it has a more plausible sound than a similar amount Connie Mack was supposed to have paid yesterday for Sam Hale, Portland, Ore., third baseman. At last reports the sum in question had been pared down by lobby gossips to $15,000, with the quotations bearing a marked downward trend.

Record Shoppe Wins Many Friends Here

people, California's choicest musical and dramatic talent.

In addition to their activities as proprietors of the record shop Mr. and Mrs. James are both talented artists and have appeared on entertainment programs in all parts of Southern California. Mr. James is a singer and monologist while Mrs. James is a dramatic reader and has also appeared in motion pictures.

Previous to the world war, Mr. James was engaged in newspaper work in San Francisco and during the 1915 exposition appeared as singer on the exposition programs.

After war was declared he entered the service and was overseas, where he proved most popular as an entertainer. Upon the signing of the armistice and his return to the United States he was made entertainment director of forty-two reconstruction hospitals in the United States and his duties required his traveling 58,000 miles. He also served the government as speaker for the various Liberty Loan drives.

In proof of his interest in the disabled world war veterans, Mr. James recently sent a gift collection of records to Ward No. 13 at the Sawtelle home and he has just received a hearty letter of appreciation.

English monologues are Mr. James' favorite dramatic sport and his "Englishman at the Baseball Game" and "The Englishman on American Humor" are greatly enjoyed by his audiences. He has made Nordskog records of both sketches and the records are to be on sale in all Nordskog shops.

The Nordskog records have been on the market but sixty days, but if the popularity of Mr. and Mrs. James' little music shop is any prediction of their success then they have come to be a real source of pleasure and entertainment.

Trojans Chosen to Contest Penn State

CORVALLIS, Ore., Dec. 6—The University of Southern California has been selected to play Penn State at Pasadena on New Year's day.

Dr. U. G. Duback, president of the Pacific coast conference, made the announcement last night after arrival of the Idaho vote, which had been delayed.

The Trojans received six of the eight votes, Dr. Duback said.

University of Oregon received one vote, cast by itself.

Idaho voted for the University of California, explaining that it believed that the best coast conference eleven should be selected. California, however, had withdrawn from consideration in midseason.

Balloting was done by mail and the faculty representative of each institution cast the vote for the institution. It was the first time that the plan was used in selecting the western representatives for Pasadena honors.

STUDENT FAVORS PHYSICAL STUDY

Writer Says Knowledge of Body Should Be Part of School Training

By FRED PECK, '24

Just as intellectual education has been a long evolutionary process, so also has been physical education and hygiene.

Perhaps the Greeks were the first people to realize the value of physical education and hygiene. In fact, Plato's words are an expression of their views: "The fair mind in the fair body will be the fairest and loveliest of all sights to Him that has the seeing eye."

In other words, the physical as well as the intellectual development of man has been recognized as an absolute necessity of life.

Required Many Years

It took years before the United States established a department of physical education in its public schools. The first step toward this direction was taken in 1889 in Boston, at a physical education conference in which the United States commissioner of education, William T. Harris, presided. The result of the conference was the adoption of a plan by which a department of physical training and hygiene was to be established in the schools.

From that time on great progress has been made toward the ideal of physical education. Today the modern views owe their origin to the belief that "to work the mind is also to work a number of bodily organs, that no feeling can arise, not a thought pass without action of concurring bodily processes." The modern scientific ideal of physical education recognizes two chief aims, viz: health, moral growth, and development of the body as an efficient organism; psycho-motor education, with emphasis on bodily control, and the expression of personality or character of the individuals.

Aim of Health

The first aim of health is a long process. It begins in the kindergarten where the child begins his training. In order that the child might develop successfully, his surroundings must be fitting. He should pay especial attention to his teeth and to the care of the body.

In the care of the body, athletics, such as football, baseball and basketball add greatly to one's school life. They build up the body, and a student who is equipped with a healthy body invariably is healthy in all his studies.

Honesty's Reward

By IVA LA FRANCHI

Jack Patterson was the only son of a poor widow. He worked in a hardware store, receiving very small wages. His mother took in washings so as to make both ends meet.

One day Mrs. Patterson took sick. So, of course, Jack stayed at home, losing a week's wages. Now there was a doctor's bill, the rent and a grocery bill to pay.

It happened one Saturday when Jack was coming home that he saw something lying on the ground. He stooped and picked up a roll of bills. He ran home all excited. "Where did you get that money?" asked Mrs. Patterson. "I found it," answered Jack, all out of breath. His mother looked at the money but she only sighed and said, "We need the money badly, but it does not belong to us." "Why, I hadn't thought of that," said Jack. "I will go and advertise it right now."

It so happened that the money belonged to a rich lawyer who asked Jack if he would'nt like a position in his office. Jack gladly said "Yes." The lawyer also gave Jack the money, which was fifty dollars.

"Now, don't you think it pays to be honest?" said Mrs. Patterson to Jack that night.

Life In Country

By FOSTER EVANS
Grand View, age 12

When I lived on my uncle's ranch in Kennewick, Washington, I had to go very far to school.

I left home at seven-thirty o'clock in the morning and walked four miles. At the end of my four-mile walk, I had to take a bus and travel four and a half miles. I then reached the school at eleven o'clock.

School closed at two-thirty o'clock in the afternoon. At its close I took the bus for four and one-half miles back on my homeward journey. On leaving the bus I walked four miles to reach home which I reached at six o'clock.

When I got there the horses were waiting to be watered and I had to take them a distance of about a mile to the watering place. I also had to perform this job every morning.

One day when I was taking the horses to water, one of them got away from me and I had to get on the second horse and go after him. That morning I was late for school. You can imagine how I felt for it was the first and only time I was ever late.

When we moved and came to Glendale I found school life entirely different. In place of beginning at eleven and closing at two-thirty, it began at nine o'clock and closed at three. I found that I could learn more in one day in Glendale than I could in one week at this small country school.

SCHOOLS

This is American Education Week. It is being observed by the schools of Glendale. Pupils are preparing for publication reasons why education—more of it—is necessary. In these columns will be found brief articles by Glendale pupils.

American Language

DORIS TAYLOR, '23

It is a strange thing, this language of ours. Have you ever paused to picture the bewilderment and utter hopelessness of a foreigner who has wandered into a study of our conversational vocabulary? Think of the oceans of slang through which he must swim. That same good-natured carelessness peculiar to the American people is responsible for the incomprehensible lingo we speak. Slang appeals to ready American humor as spicy and shallowly clever. These two qualities are not particularly nourishing as a steady diet, nor can a language so constructed form a very bewitching heritage for our children or voice the traditions of a great nation.

We Americans are not as serious-minded as our foreign brothers. It is nothing to us that we are wantonly defacing the dignified, graceful language that our mother country gave to us. I do not believe that other equally civilized nations are quite so careless. In a clever play *by the Frenchmen, Martin and Labiche, one of the characters is heard to remark, "La langue francaise est une dame de bonne maison et je ne permets pas qu on eclabousse sa robe." (The French language is a fine lady and I do not permit anyone to soil her robe).

There are some who, observing the carelessness of their countrymen, pride themselves on the most scrupulous correctness of speech. Many over-zealous ones carefully avoid the homely idioms peculiar to our language. This is the other extreme and like all extremes it is unwise. When searching out the tares one must not destroy the wheat also. Idioms should be employed freely. They are an important part of the American language.

Perhaps the most certain proof of the unserviceableness of slang in comparison with good old idioms is the rapidity with which it goes out of fashion. Every so often there is a general housecleaning in which the cast-off lingo of yesterday is quietly dispensed with and a new set of slang is ushered in—very smart and snappy, ladies and gentlemen, but entirely too freakish for sane usage. If we are to have a language which we choose to call American let us have pride and patriotism enough to see that it is an improvement not a corruption of the language that gave it birth—the English langauge.

Treasure of Cliffs

By LOUISE BRIDGMAN
Age 12 Years
Cerritos Avenue School

Camped near a stream in the Wyoming hills was the Guthberry family. They had chosen this secluded spot to be completely away from civilization for a quiet vacation. Their children, Pearl and Ernest, were very venturesome.

One day they decided to climb a gigantic ledge of rock some distance away.

After a long, hard climb they came upon some open caves. They began exploring them. They found roughly hewn stone and wooden furnishings which gave evidence that sometime they had been inhabited.

They climbed to a still higher ledge where they found a larger cave. Their attention was attracted to a large stone jar. Ernest cautiously lifted the heavy stone lid and lo, to their amazement it contained large yellow nuggets of pure gold. Awe struck and surprised they stood gazing at it. Knowing that no human hands had touched it for perhaps centuries they felt that the treasure was theirs. Ernest filled his bandanna handkerchief, while Pearl filled her sun hat.

They lost no time in getting down the rough trail and gleefully planned what they would do with their treasure.

Safety First

By ERMA GANZLER
11 Years, Pacific School

Everyone who is old enough ought to learn danger signs, poison marks and signals. That is Safety First.

Parents should teach their children the danger of hanging on to autos when on skates or riding bicycles, of crossing in front of street cars and of coming from behind a car. These mean danger to those who are not careful.

Every mother ought to have a medicine case and label all bottles that contain poison. If a small child can reach the bottle, no one can tell what that child will do. It usually means danger.

It is the duty of mothers to put matches out of the baby's reach. No mother ought to leave her little children alone in the house when she goes to town for they are apt to turn on the gas. Matches and gas mean danger.

Whenever a person sees a lighted cigarette in the grass, he ought to put it out or that will mean danger.

Mothers and children must try to observe "Safety First."

Life of Millet

By MILDRED LEWIS
Colorado Boulevard School,
Age 11 Years

Jean Francois Millet lived in a small town near Cherbourg. His parents were very poor peasants. Millet used to help his grandma with the housework, while his mother and father worked in the fields. Millet loved to draw, and when the fire went out he took a piece of charcoal and drew on his shoes or on the buildings.

One day a man saw that Millet took an interest in drawing and said, "My boy, you should go to the contest that is to be held in Paris. The one who paints the best picture receives a free art course."

So Millet went, and won the course. After taking a few lessons, he thought of his folks at home.

So he walked home, but his grandma would not let him stay. She said that he might be a great artist if he took lessons, so she went to her stocking that she had hidden away and gave him some money and sent him back to Paris. As Millet studied very hard he soon became a great artist.

Some of Millet's pictures are, "Feeding Her Birds," "The Shepherdess and the Shepherd," "First Steps," "The Gleaners," and "The Angelus."

Millet died in 1875.

Some Excitement

By CHARLOTTE LANE
11 Years, 6-A Grand View

I do not remember much about the time I was in Mexico.

One day alone made a deep impression on my mind. That was the day the natives had their great festival.

It was on a sunny day that we went to see the festival. Juanita Gonzales was out bright and early. She caught her white rooster. Tony, her brother, got his donkey. They put wreaths of flowers around their necks. Tony put ribbons on his donkey's tail. They went to the festival, the girl carrying her rooster, the boy riding his donkey.

My brother had taken a great fancy for bull fights. We never had gone to one before because my mother did not approve of them. But on this day my brother coaxed me to slip off to see one. What a horrible sight! When the bull was first stabbed and the blood ran out everything turned black before my eyes. I begged in vain for my brother to come home with me. After that day I never liked to hear of a bull fight.

Mother scolded us severely for going without her permission.

Exciting Time

By GRACE ANDERSON
11 Years, Columbus Ave.

One day my mother took me to Venice. We had seen all the sights, and were leaving for home when mother coaxed me to go on "A Trip Throught the Clouds." She said, "I do not think it is very steep, and I think you will like it."

We got into a little red car, and my mother and I sat in the middle seat. As soon as we got in, it started to go. We were going around and around, when all at once, we started to go down and down, until we went quite low. Then suddenly the car gave a jerk and we went up a dip that was straight up and down. We ran on the level for a while, then all of a sudden the car took another dip even worse than the first. We rode a little farther and then we came to a part which went out over the water. When I looked down I thought I was going to fall into the water. The car went around and around, and down and down. My heart was in my mouth, as it dropped lower and lower, until it took my breath away. My mother said I was white as a sheet and that I almost fainted.

Since then "A Trip Through the Clouds" has burnt down, and I am glad, as I do not want any other girl or boy to be as frightened as I was that day.

The Seven Sisters

By MARGARET POMEROY
Grand View School. Grade B4, age 9 years.

Once upon a time there were seven sisters, and they lived in the Pacific ocean.

One day the sun shone very brightly, and it evaporated some of the ocean so the seven sisters went up into the air but the wind blew them away. The wind was blowing very hard and it blew one of the sisters off of the cloud. It dropped to the mountain and, of course, as the mountain was very rocky and water could not soak in the ground very well, it slowly sank and came out in a spring. Two of the sisters saw a peach grove which had nearly died of thirst. They thought they would give it some water so they dropped to the peach grove and soaked into the dry roots. Two of the sisters were frightened so that they fell to the ground. The last sister came to the desert and dropped to the ground.

FOOTBALL MATCH CITIZEN BUILDER

Student Says Game Played by Schools Develops One's Mentality

By GLENN ROBERTS, '24

This seems a queer way to state it, but a close investigation into the sport will bring out the fact that it has all the necessary elements to develop good citizens.

The first necessity to become a good citizen is physical fitness. Football like no other sport develops the body. It demands constant training in everyday life, as well as on the football field. To carry the ball one must be able to run fast in the open field and hit the line hard on close formation. One must be in the very pink of condition to withstand the knocks of breaking up interference or running back punts.

The physical benefits are easily self-evident, but the player must also be able to think and act quickly. Many regard the game as one of brute strength, but no one can play who is unable to think out the signals. The mind must be constantly awake throughout the game as a blunder of signals is hard to patch up.

The next important item in citizenship is team work. Everyone working together for benefits to the community. This is the first principle taught in football. One man could never advance the ball unaided, but with the whole team working together progress can be made.

The men on the line never touch the ball and yet they play the biggest part of the game They make holes in the opposing line to let their man through, and although the one who carries the ball usually gets the credit, the line men are content for they know they are playing the game.

This shows their willingness to sacrifice their own glory for the common glory of the team, which should be the prevailing spirit in our daily lives, for no one can get far bucking the world alone.

Another great factor in the making of good citizens is regularity and "stick-to-it-iveness."

During the football season a player must be at every practice without fail. This is the first law laid down by the coach. Perseverance rests entirely with the man himself. He may be tired of coming out every night; tired of working hard, but a real football player will keep it up for the love of the sport alone.

All this is training towards good citizenship for the lessons learned on the football field will be remembered long after lessons in geometry or physics are forgotten.

Down on the Farm

By GEORGE GREY
Age 11 Years
Central Avenue School

I went to Kelso, Washington, with my parents last summer on my vacation.

We visited my grandfather who lives on a farm.

I went with my aunt to help bring home the cows every evening. My uncle and grandfather milked them. I watched them feed the calves. It was great fun. One of the cows was so gentle that I could sit on her back.

Uncle Albert had a dog whose name was Jess. I would take him with me when I went hunting.

The hay baling crew came while we were there. I rode on the sled down in the hay field.

We caught field mice under the hay shocks.

My aunt took us in the auto to pick wild blackberries that grew along the fences.

I went trout fishing twice in Cold creek and also fished for croppies in the back water of the Columbia river.

I had cherries of all kinds to eat and climbed the trees to get them. The crows liked cherries, too.

I found mud turtles' nests in the sand and I saw the eggs. They were very odd looking. They were white and about as large as my thumb. The mother turtle put water from the lake on the nest to keep the sand damp. The nest was on the bank of the lake.

I had a fine time while I was visiting there.

Finds Playfellow

By MARJORIE GREEN
Age 12, Acacia School

"I want something to play with," said Fluff, as he looked at the basket where his sisters were sleeping, all curled up like a bundle of fur.

"I am sure I can't play with them," he murmured.

He trotted up the walk, glancing back, to make sure that his tail was following. Out on the lawn the sprinkler was going, so he tried to play with the shiny drops. But Oh, they were so very wet!

"There is no playing with them," he decided. So he went up on the porch where a big black spider was spinning his silvery web. The look on the spider's face was enough to make Fluff shiver. So he jumped through the window that opened into the living room to see if the piano would play with him. He jumped at the piano to frighten it, but, of course, the piano didn't move.

Just then, who should come in but his mistress. She picked him up and said "Naughty Fluff!" And then threw him right into the spider's web. Fluff jumped up and ran to the garden where his sisters were at play. They cried, "Oh, Fluff, will you play something?" "Oh, sisters," panted Fluff, "I've been playing something.!"

EMERSON SCHOOL GIVES MUSICALE

Pupils Participate In Show Staged at C. of C. Hall; Big Attendance

The rooms of the Chamber of Commerce were completely filled Tuesday night when the advanced pupils of the Emerson School of Self Expression, assisted by new members of the faculty and visiting artists, presented an entertaining program.

The opening number, "Hungarian Dance" (Brahms) was very beautifully interpreted by Miss Ella James, who responded to an encore with "When Thy Blue Eyes" and "Berceuse Slave (Neruda). Miss James is from Australia and has appeared before audiences in many parts of the world. She will undoubtedly be a welcome addition to musical circles of Glendale.

Miss Katrina Gumensky, who is to join the faculty of the school, gave three very beautiful artistic numbers. The Russian Boyar Dance, in native costume, with beautiful beaded head dress, which was wonderfully becoming to her; Moskowski's Spanish Dance, in a brilliant yellow Spanish costume, and the final number, Gipsy Dance (Brahms) in red and yellow of Italy. All illustrated delightfully the years of training that have developed her talent and grace to a marked degree. Miss Gumensky is a native of Russia. She was a member of the Imperial ballet for eight years. She has also danced with Pavlova.

Juveniles On Bill

The numbers, "Moo Cow, Moo," by little Vera Mercer, age five, and "Jack Tends the Baby" by Bill Rhodes, delighted the audience. The playlet, "Philippa As a Reformer," by Maurine Baker, as Philippa; Martha H. Johnson as Tibbie, the maid, and Henry Biederman as the uncle, was cleverly enacted and mirth-provoking.

Another musical treat was given by a visiting artist, Mme. Teodora Wisnieska, coloratura soprano, who gave a beautiful rendition of "Une Voce Poca Fa" from "Barbiere de Seviglia" and "Vespri Siciliani" (Verdi), with accompaniment by Mme. Romanovsky. She responded to a hearty encore with a charming light melody.

A surprise number was a very artistic performance on the steel guitar by Mrs. Ruth Edith Lane, director of classes in stringed instruments.

The Emerson School, according to directors, is outgrowing its present quarters and attendance at the regular recitals has increased until the rooms at the school are almost inadequate to accommodate the parents and friends. The evening's entertainment was directed by Mrs. Evelyn Labadie, founder and director of the Emerson School.

Miss Lila Litch, of the piano department of the school, accompanied the dancing numbers

Illiteracy

By MILDRED MATHEWS

How many of us who derive much enjoyment from the printed page realize that five million adult American citizens are wholly unable to read and write; that millions more recognize only simple words; and that still other millions, able to read hesitatingly, rarely do read? A large percentage of American adults are illiterates or near-illiterates almost wholly isolated from the world of ideas and progress. Such illiteracy is a barrier to democracy.

The introduction of linotype, monotype, rotary press and woodpulp paper have put within the reach of everyone the cheap and convenient printed page. Cheap printing is the ready means of extending information, and makes possible that fundamental intelligence on which democracy is based. Illiterates, however, deprived of this first aid to democracy, retard the progress of us all. It is clear that everyone in his community, in order to enjoy the benefits of government by representation, must be informed on all matters of common interest and importance. Without general extension of ability to read and write, how can this be possible?

Larger provision should be made for furnishing instruction to adult illiterates through the public school. We require the untaught child to go to school and we should also require the adult to go until he learns at least to read and write. There cannot be any question that such a large percentage of adult illiterates is a menace to representative government, industrial prosperity, and the good of the whole United States.

Illiteracy, in its final analysis, signifies increased expense for production; lowered wages; the sweat shop; segregated profits; industrial agitation and unrest. It promotes race prejudice and class hatred; it precludes that mutual understanding and ability to co-operate which must underlie well-managed industry and efficient democracy. Illiteracy debases political and social standards; it is a clog on inteligent workmanship, homemaking, public health and good citizenship.

MONEY TO LOAN

PICK OUT YOUR HOME ANYWHERE IN GLENDALE EAGLE ROCK, OR SAN FERNANDO VALLEY I'LL HELP YOU BUY IT

If you can spare $30 per month ($1 per day) above your present expenses, I will help you finance the purchase of a $5000 home.

By this method my clients find that they obtain lower prices from owners; they are paying their rent to themselves; they are paying several hundred dollars less interest and they are acting as their own broker and banker.

I will help finance the purchase of any property to cost from $1000 to as high as you care to go at less than 6 per cent net cost to you for the use of the money needed and all services rendered. The payments you can make each month will govern the extent to which I can serve you.

Which One?

By WILLIAM PEARCE, '24

Many years ago in the days of our forefathers, it was not considered a heinous offense to be illiterate, as education was neither free nor compulsory, but with the advancing years educational facilities have increased to such an extent that with education right at one's door it is indeed a disgrace to be illiterate.

Illiteracy is a serious drawback to a country as it hampers good citizenship, for an ignorant person is easily influenced, making it a comparatively simple task for a politician to win him over to bolshevism or to cause him to sympathize with the I. W. W.'s or other agitators too numerous to mention. An uneducated person also has difficulty in filling out his ballot and often votes simply as some friend or relation tells him to.

Furthermore, in case of war, it takes a great deal more time and effort to initiate an illiterate into the intricacies of the many military maneuvers and drill formations than it does to make a soldier out of a well educated man whose brain has been trained to function rapidly and to grasp facts without a great deal of slow and arduous thinking.

Business is greatly affected by illiteracy, as workmen who have received no education cannot perform a given task as well as a man who can think clearly and rapidly without having to stop and figure over what method it would be best to use in performing the task. In a factory where thousands of men are employed, illiterates would cause a great loss of time and doubtless turn out very imperfect products.

Several of America's foremost manufacturers have taken steps to turn out better goods by hiring only the best men obtainable. These men must meet certain qualifications and in consequence receive a much better wage than the unskilled laborer. This should act as an added incentive for the younger generation to attend school, as undoubtedly other manufacturers will soon follow this splendid example.

One can see the far-reaching power of education and the permeating influence of ignorance on nations by a study of two European countries. Germany, whose boast is that there are no illiterates in the country with the exception of idiots and maniacs, has long outstripped the world in the manufacture of toys, dyes, chemicals, knives, scissors, and many other articles. Furthermore, her universities are known throughout the world, and up to the beginning of the world war in 1914, students from every point of the globe were to be found in them. On the other hand, Russia, a country where over half the population is illiterate, has been torn asunder by treachery, corruption, bolshevism, revolutions and starvation. The people know absolutely nothing about what to do in such a crisis; other countries have gone to her aid, but yet the situation is most critical. The outcome is up to the people themselves, but, because of their lack of education, they are indeed in dire circumstances.

It is the firm opinion of the writer that illiteracy places business far behind its rightful place, is exceedingly dangerous to the country, and justifies very stringent laws regarding compulsory education.

Self-Education

By GLENN PERKINS, '23

The world today looks upon education as one of the most important factors in human living. Self education has become the responsibility of each individual, whether he acquire his knowledge in schools and colleges, by personal contact with society, or through reading books. My remarks will deal wholly with the last subject.

To acquire knowledge through schools and colleges is very good. But there are many people who haven't the chance or the money to attend these institutions. It is true that now schools are becoming well distributed, but there are still districts, even in our United States where the schools are very far apart and where transportation is not furnished. If one is not to educate himself by going to school, he should learn by reading good books. Reading places one in direct communication with the wisest and best persons of all time. To educate oneself by reading books is to defy persons and circumstances. Through books facts live, principles operate, justice acts, and the light of philosophy shines. Every reader and lover of books will agree with Channing: "No matter how poor I am, . . . if the sacred writers will enter and take up their abode under my roof, if Milton will cross my threshold to sing to me of Paradise, and Shakespeare to open to me the words of imagination, and the workings of the human heart, and Franklin to enrich me with his practical wisdom, I shall not pine for want of intellectual companionship, and I may become a cultivated man, though excluded from what is the called the best society in the place where I live." The wide range of truth secured through reading acts in two ways upon the reader. It spiritualizes his character, and it makes him strong in action. "It cannot be that people should grow in grace," writes John Wesley, "unless they give themselves to reading. A reading people will always be a knowing people." Reading makes one strong in action when it gives one knowledge, since "Knowledge is power," and since power has but one way of showing itself, and that is in action.

All of our great and well educated men have been readers. Milton, while a child, read and studied until midnight. Benjamin Franklin would sit up all night at his books and through the reading of good books received the greater part of his education. Patrick Henry was also educated through book reading. Daniel Webster was a devouring reader, and retained all he read. Says a biographer of Lincoln, "A book was almost always his inseparable companion." So it is seen that some of the greatest men of our country attended public schools very little and depended almost entirely upon books for their learning.

Greatest Enemy

By BAXTER ANDREWS

When a person admits he can neither read nor write he is classed as an illiterate. Where do we stand, in relation to other countries, in percentage of illiterates? Germany, Norway, Sweden and Denmark have two-tenths of one per cent of illiterates, the British Isles two per cent, France four and nine-tenths per cent, and our own nation six per cent. Where will we stand ten, twenty, fifty, years later? Some drastic steps will have to be taken in order that illiteracy will not increase, as it certainly will if the large families (which negroes and other classes of illiterates usually bring into the world) are not taken care of by the schools. At present they are not properly taken care of; therefore, the next census report is liable to show an increase in illiteracy.

An illiterate citizen cannot possibly be a good citizen. Most vagrants are people of no education. If they were learned they would be able to secure positions which demand skill, for, the demand for skilled laborers always exceeds the supply of skilled laborers; but the supply of unskilled laborers always exceeds the demand for unskilled laborers. If more tramps had been educated in the past things might be a bit different now.

A man who is illiterate may cause much trouble. He may join some organization (such as the I. W. W.'s) headed by unscrupulous persons who will use him as a tool to the accomplishment of selfish interests. A man who is holding a job requiring no skill is in danger of losing it if he does not vote a prescribed ticket. He dreads becoming a vagrant so votes as ordered. Even if a man is not bought over or bulldozed into voting a certain way he may have his opinions swayed by listening to some radical, and thus vote his way simply because he is unable to read the opposing arguments.

An uneducated man seriously hinders his country in time of war. A man who all his life has been thinking for himself has sufficient brain power to perform a given task without having to be told every minute detail, but an uneducated man exhibits criminal stupidity while attempting to execute the simplest drills.

Illiteracy is also a hindrance in business as ignorance is always wasteful, but skillfulness is always conservative. Henry Ford, acting on this principle, employs no one who cannot pass certain tests both mental and mechanical. With such experts working for him he is able to turn out the best product at the lowest price because there is no waste of material or time. In return for such skill and education Ford pays his lowest salaried employes six dollars per day, his managers and others more, of course. On the other hand the failure of the Lincoln and other motor companies (which Ford has taken over, and put on a paying basis) was doubtless due in a large measure to the extravagant waste of high-priced raw material by uneducated workmen.

Illiteracy is a national problem, since an illiterate nation can have no national pride, cannot boast good citizenship, cannot succeed in war, and cannot prosper in business; but the problem has become too big for the federal government to handle, too big for the state to handle, and also too big for the city to handle. So the final responsibility rests with you, with me, and with all of us. If we shirk our responsibility, succeeding generations will suffer. We dare not be found wanting. Let us unite and quickly abolish our illiteracy by building more school houses and then by enforcing compulsory attendance.

Better School

By DOROTHY PRENDEVILLE
11 Years, Broadway School

I can help to make my school better by having a good spirit in the classroom and on the playground. I should not criticise some one unjustly for that isn't fair and that one didn't deserve it.

Another way of making my school better is by not throwing stones, paper, or rubbish around the school grounds. Somebody new coming to school, seeing untidy grounds, would probably go home and tell his parents. Then the school wouldn't have a very good name.

Then it is also my duty to keep clean, for when visitors come they would most likely admire the appearance of the boys and girls.

Another way of helping my school is by being good in class and doing what the teacher wants.

Other children will then follow my example.

ALFRED COOKMAN TELLS OF SPIDER

Robber, Murderer, Thief and Not Insect, Yet Offers Lessons, Says Writer

Under the title of "Spiders and Their Labors," Alfred Cookman, M. S., 336 West Pioneer Drive, Glendale, of the department of biology of the Polytechnic High school of Los Angeles, has written the following article, the first of a series, for The Glendale Evening News:

By ALFRED COOKMAN, M. S.

"Facts will remain, theories may change."

There is a 'web of life' spun around the world—the luminous background of living things—the idea of linkage in nature, the ideal of the correlation of organisms fascinates the lover of natural phenomena and the study of biology opens her pages of mystery to the individual whose heart and soul are in tune with nature's epitome.

There is a ceaseless circulation of matter and energy. All things flow. Influence passes from A to Z, though Z is quite unaware of A. The science of arachnology (spiders) is a field that has been badly neglected. There are a comparatively few men of science interested in spiders and their labors, and yet spiders progress, work instinctively with some degree of intelligence and exhibit the most marvelous skill of invertebrate engineering.

Robber, Murderer, Thief

To the average individual spiders are abhored and avoided. Every move seems treacherous. Every act seems wrapped in shrouds of mystery. All spiders bite and some have injected venomous secretions resulting in death, and yet, we have to admire them. They are a robber, murderer and a thief, and yet, there are lessons we can obtain of moral value by carefully observing the spider as he works diligently in procuring food and in the construction of his web, or snare to entrap his prey. The relation of instinct to intelligence is certainly marked. They are clever. For instance, they rank equally well with the bees, wasps and the ants. For skill and industry, they are unsurpassed. As a warrior, they are deadly. As a family or domestic personality, they are the most inhospitable and the most unsociable of any animal. They are very pugnacious.

What "Spider" Means

The word "spider" means "spinning one." There are four important differences between true insects and spiders. Spiders are closely related to insects, but they are NOT insects. The body of an insect is divided into three parts: head, thorax and abdomen. The body of a spider has but two parts. The head and thorax are united (cephalo-thorax) and the abdomen. Insects have six legs and usually one or two pairs of wings. Spiders have eight legs and no wings. Insects are furnished with feelers. The spider is furnished with a somewhat different organ called palps. They look like an extra pair of small legs that extend out from the head region of the body. The young of insects go through incomplete and complete metamorphosis. Young spiders hatch from eggs.

Spiders have seven joints in their legs. Insects have six. The feet of spiders are furnished with claws. A little comb is located at the extreme end of the claw. There are usually three combs. They are wonderful little instruments with which the spider grasps the thread while spinning the web. The spider combs out the thread as she works. If you will recall the fineness of the threads of a spider's web you can appreciate what a tiny, delicate tool this is.

Serve As Feelers

The palps are attached to the mouth-parts, and resemble a pair of short legs. They are five jointed and protrude in front of the spider as it crawls about and serve the same purpose as the feelers of insects.

The palps of the female is even more complex and delicate than that of the male. It is furnished at the end with a little toothed claw, which she uses much like a hand. With it she seizes and dispatches her prey; with the two palps she holds and carries her cocoons from place to place. The jaws of spiders, though small, are terrible. They are made to work like nippers and are provided with tooth fangs.

The fangs are sharp and are hollow. Near the point of each tooth is a tiny hole, through which the poison is emitted. The fang serves the spider well in attacking its prey, and also in self-defense.

The mouth is placed back of the jaws. It is an organ made for suction, and is surrounded by lips for crushing out the juices of insects. Spiders do not swallow solid particles of food. They live on the juices of insects and are therefore of economic value. The average spider is worth a dollar a year to the farmers and fruit growers of California.

Most insects have compound eyes and in the adult stage they have added three simple eyes on the top of the head. Spiders have eight simple eyes that are placed on a slight eminence on the head and arranged in pairs or in group formation. The sight of spiders is poor. Their power of hearing and sense vibration is wonderfully adjusted to meet the demand of the arachnid. They eyes are protected by a transparent, horny covering. Some spiders have only two, some six, but most spiders possess eight eyes.

Last About Four Years

The skin of spiders is finely scaled. They shed their skin nine times during their life. The average life of a spider is four years. Some are naked spiders, others are sparsely haired and some are ferruginous.

The spinnerets are organs with which the spider spins its gossamer threads and they are situated near the extremity of the abdomen. It consists of 4 or 6 spinning fingers, with many tiny tubes, or spools, at the ends, out of which the silk issues.

The spider uses different spools for spinning different kinds of silk, according to the use which is to be made of it. They spin cocoons, webs, snares or sticky beads to capture prey. The first problem for the spider to solve when it reaches an adult stage is the feeding problem. "How can I catch my prey?" The web is his snare. Instinctive intelligence is put into play, so the spider weaves the web, in which the wary insect is imprisoned.

The supply of silk is limited. If you destroy one web they will go to work and spin another, but there is a limit to the quantity of silk. If a spider's silk runs out she will attack another spider, usually a weaker variety, in her web and kill her and become queen of her domain, or go homeless.

Spiders are unsociable. They live alone. No two spiders occupy the same web. Two spiders in a web are certain to quarrel.

In the next article the writer will explain how the spider constructs her web, fights with an enemy, captures her prey and some thrilling adventures with spiders at home, at work and at play.

King George Signs Free State Papers

LONDON, Dec. 6.—King George during a meeting of the privy council at Buckingham palace today signed a proclamation that the Irish free state now is officially in existence.

At the same time the king signed the royal warrant appointing Timothy Healy first governor-general of the Irish free state.

The ceremony was marked with characteristic pomp, the king appearing in full uniform.

Precedent was broken in the case of the Irish free state. Usually men of high rank and title are selected for governors-general of the dominions. Healy is a commoner and a native of Ireland.

American Liner Is Returning to Port

HONOLULU, Dec. 6.—The United States shipping board liner President Taft of the Pacific Mail line which sailed from here Saturday night for the Orient, was due to arrive back here Tuesday, having been forced to turn back and limp into port by engine trouble. Arrangements have been made to rush repairs and the liner is expected to sail again for the Orient Friday.

REAL ESTATE MEN HOLD STATE MEET

Realtors' Annual Convention Opens Tonight at Santa Ana With Ball

A large delegation of Glendale real estate men are expected to attend the Eighteenth Annual Convention of the California Real Estate Association, which convenes in Santa Ana today. The opening day, according to announcement, will be given over to the registration of delegates at the St. Ann's Inn, official headquarters.

The night of December 6 the president of the association will hold his first annual reception and grand ball. All members of the real estate fraternity will participate.

President and Mrs. C. C. C. Tatum will be at the head of the receiving line, and they will also lead the grand ball. It is stated that the Sacramento Realtors' association, bidding for the 1923 state convention, will send to Santa Ana its famous Days of '49 Dancing Set, headed by former State President Daniel W. Carmichael and Mrs. Carmichael. This old-fashioned dance proved the hit of the president's ball at the national real estate convention in the Palace last June.

Thursday morning the convention will be formally opened by President Tatum. Delegates from more than 100 California realty boards are expected to be present. Owing to the enormous advance demand for accommodations, the city of Santa Ana has been taxed to the utmost, but the local realty board, headed by President Freeman H. Bloodgood, has received splendid co-operation from the entire city, and all guests will be taken care of.

Prominent Men Guests

Former United States Senator Cornelius Cole will be a speaker at the opening session. Honorable Frank F. Merriam, one of the leaders in the Lower House at Sacramento, will also attend. Owing to pressure of business in connection with preparing the new budget, Governor-elect Friend W. Richardson will be unable to attend the convention.

The luncheon on Thursday will be presided over by Regional Director Everett A. White and will be given in honor of the real estate editors of California. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to legislative and colonization matters. Multiple listing also will be discussed. The ladies will be entertained at an all afternoon party and dinner at Laguna Beach. More than thirty realty boards will compete Thursday night in the Home Town contest.

Election of new directors and officers and choosing of the 1923 convention city will take place Friday morning and at noon the entire convention will be guests of the Anaheim Realty Board at luncheon in the Anaheim Elks hall. Friday afternoon will be devoted to sightseeing. The eighteenth annual banquet will be held Friday evening, and among those responding to toasts will be William May Garland, E. O. McCormick, W. I. Hollingsworth, Donzel Stoney and for the women realtors, Bertha Chase Dobbin of Long Beach. Awards will be made at the banquet of the prizes in the Home Town, Achievement, Attendance and Newspaper Editors contests.

State Realtors Named

J. W. S. Butler, president of the California Bar Association, will address the getaway luncheon on Saturday, and during the morning there will be a discussion of leading topics. Among the many California realtors on the three days business program may be mentioned the following:

M. V. Hartranft, president of California Home Extension association; Will H. Moor, formerly president Toledo Real Estate Board; Arthur M. Gilman, former president Michigan Real Estate association; Charles F. Crick, Pasadena, former vice president New York State association; Bruce Cornwall, chairman California Land Owners' Conference; Herman Janss, chairman California Real Estate Association Farm Lands Committee; Henry P. Barbour, winner Home Town contest at Oakland; W. Ross Campbell, W. H. Daum, Harold Janss, Frank Ryan, Robert Marsh and others of Los Angeles; Fred E. Reed, F. Bruce Maiden; R. Porter Giles and F. F. Porter of Oakland; Emile Kohn, Leslie E. Burks, St. George Holden, and others of San Francisco; Duncan McDuffie of Berkeley; W. L. Atkinson, C. F. Crothers of San Jose; John G. Munholland, Long Beach; Hal G. Hotchkiss, C. E. Arnold, Roscoe Porter, San Diego; J. F. Corbett, Willows; John T. Summers, Santa Rosa; Chris R. Jones, E. H. Trafler; Will C. Wright of Sacramento; Speed B. Leas of Fresno; R. A. Moore of Bakersfield.

Harold J. Stonier of the University of Southern California will address the luncheon at Anaheim on real estate education at college.

New Feature Listed

Perhaps a most interesting and useful feature of the entire program will be the multiple listing conference over which Vice President Albert E. Kern will preside. The speaker will be H. C. Vose, secretary and managing director of the Southwest Realty Board of Los Angeles, whose board has successfully operated on the multiple listing basis.

Beside President C. C. C. Tatum, officers of the California Real Estate Association include Vice Presidents Albert E. Kern, San Francisco; Frazier O. Reed, San Jose; C. H. Antrim, Fresno; Treasurer O. A. Vickrey, Los Angeles; Secretary and Managing Director Glenn D. Willaman. There are over 100 directors in the association. Quarterly meetings are held.

The association this year will consider the plan of regional vice presidencies, dividing the state into ten regional dictricts with a vice president elected at the convention, presiding, over each district. An average of ten realty boards to a vice president will be alloted.

The second annual convention of the California Association of Realtor secretaries will be held Friday and Saturday mornings at Santa Ana. Leslie E. Burks of San Francisco is president, and R. Porter Giles of Oakland, secretary. Tom Ingersoll will address the convention.

Georges Clemenceau Will Meet Wilson

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—At his meeting with Woodrow Wilson scheduled for late this afternoon, Georges Clemenceau is going to talk "about many things," he said today in response to a question.

One of the things he is going to talk about is what chance there would be for greater American participation in European affairs under a Democratic administration.

M. Clemenceau and Mr. Wilson meet again in Washington as equals, as they did in Paris. At the Paris conference as the representatives of two great governments, neither hesitated to tell the other at that time just what was what. Today the "tiger" and the former American President are likewise on equal footing, private but influential citizens of their respective countries and holding different views on many questions.

If Mr. Wilson persists, as seems possible, in his publicly stated opinion that France is militaristic, he doubtless will say so, with proper respect for the fact that the "tiger" is his guest. And when he does, Clemenceau will deny it with all the earnestness of his nature, for it was chiefly to make that denial that he abandoned his hermit's hut in the Ventee and came to America to sing what he calls his "swan song."

Clemenceau will tell Mr. Wilson that he is not opposed to the League of Nations, that he agreed to it in the treaty of Versailles, though somewhat against his will. He will say he believes the United States should join in it if the American people approve, but he will also say he doesn't believe the League will end war.

BIG 1-CENT SALE AT SPOHR'S STORE

Buy Article at List Price, Get Another One by Paying Only Penny More

The original 1-cent sale, originated and conducted by the United Drug company of Boston, Mass., for the purpose of acquainting new customers with the complete drug stock carried by Rexall stores throughout the United States and Canada, will be held by A. G. Spohr, the Rexall dealer in Glendale, December 8 and 9, according to announcement made this morning.

"These sales are held by the 8000 stores selling Rexall goods twice a year," Mr. Spohr stated. "Briefly, a customer purchasing any of the articles listed at the sale price can duplicate his or her purchase for another penny.

"Purchasers cannot buy quantities of any one item as these sales are held by the Rexall stores to acquaint the public with Rexall goods in all lines. A limit will be placed on quantity purchases.

Largest of Its Kind

"The United Drug company is perhaps the largest industry of its kind in the world. Its buildings in Boston occupy more than ten acres of land. A Rexall store is maintained in every city and town of importance in the United States and Canada."

Mr. Spohr says that a great many people are of the opinion that Rexall stores handle only patent medicines. In order to correct this impression, he says he wishes to announce that Rexall stores handle everything in the merchantable line carried by any other drug concern.

The United Drug company's plant in Boston manufactures not only drugs, but also its own paper articles, rubber goods, etc., he asserts.

Texas Beauty Queen Will Go to Ireland

Miss Elder will make an extended visit with relatives at Bainbridge, Ireland, after which she expects to return to her home in Wichita, Kan.

London Wants Fog Remedy From U. S.

LONDON—London is looking to America to solve the big question of fog. For centuries London has spent its winters in the midst of unceasing fogs. Now they hear that Pittsburgh scientists have discovered means of dispelling fogs and they are all excited in hopes that the dread winter fogs are going to be done away with through American ingenuity.

Prohibition Leader Heckled by 'Wets'

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6.—Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes was subject to heckling by "wet" members of the house appropriation committee when he appeared before them in support of an appropriation of $9,000,000 to carry on enforcement work for the next fiscal year, and was disclosed today when the report of his appearance became public.

Representative Gallivan, Democrat of Massachusetts, a "wet," questioned Haynes closely about the workings of his bureau paying particular attention to "missionary work" done in advancing prohibition sentiment.

Haynes told the committee of trips he made about the country for lectures. He said he was ually accompanied by Sherman A. Cuneo, publicity representative, who receives $2,250 a year as a general agent.

Representative Gallivan asked Haynes if he had knowledge that Cuneo had telegraphed at government expense from Miami, Fla., while President Harding was there, directing:

"Please send me white pants. I want to make a front in front of the president."

Haynes said he knew Cuneo was in Florida at the time, but he did not know about the telegram.

John Wesley Hill, a former minister, and Miss Georgia Hopley are carried on the rolls, Haynes testified, not as agents but to give information in public addresses. He said this was a part of wise propaganda work.

Gallivan questioned the prohibition commissioner closely about a statement attributed to him to the effect that 20,000,000 Americans had gone "on the water wagon" last year. Haynes declined to confirm the figures as his own but stated the number of those who had been converted to prohibition was large.

"There is a steadily growing and splendid reaction in favor of prohibition," said Haynes. "We are now at the climax of our fight."

Questioned about the working of his detective forces, Haynes said it had been found frequently necessary to purchase evidence upon which convictions could be secured and that about $150,000 had been spent in this phase of the work last year.

Eagle Glen Heights Lots In Big Demand

It is confidently expected that the remaining lots at Eagle Glen Heights will have been disposed of by the end of this month, according to the announcement made by H. V. Henry, local manager for the J. Harvey McCarthy company at that beautiful foothill tract. Mr. Henry stated that most of the subdivision has already been sold.

"Eagle Glen Heights has been one of the most successful and most popular of Mr. McCarthy's residential developments," said Mr. Henry. "Its success was assured from the start because the great acreage included in it comprises what is really the last good available foothill property within the Glendale city limits. There has been a strong movement towards the hills in recent years. It was because of this movement that Mr. McCarthy acquired the Eagle Glen Heights property. With the exception of a few very excellent homesites, all of the lots have been disposed of mainly to well-known residents of Glendale. Several fine homes have already been erected and now that improvements are in there are many more projected. I feel confident that within one year from this date every site in Eagle Glen Heights will have been built on.

"Towards this gratifying achievement much credit must go to the 'pulling power' of the advertising columns of The Glendale Evening News. The results of our advertising campaign have been very gratifying and have proved conclusively to us that newspapers are very closely watched by home-buyers."

I. W. W. Prisoners Placed In Dungeon

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., Dec. 6.—Ten I. W. W.'s serving sentences for criminal syndicalism were in the prison dungeon today on a bread and water diet as a result of a strike against work.

James Olson, 27, was reported to have started the strike when he laid down his tools in the jute mill. One by one the nine other I. W .W.'s followed, each being given the alternative of the dungeon or work.

Steps were taken by penitentiary authorities to prevent the "strike" from spreading to other prisoners.

Great Lakes Region Hit by Cold Spell

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—The cold spell, which has held the northwest in its grip for nearly a week, shifted to Chicago and the Great Lakes region today. The mercury fell steadily early this morning.

A sixty-mile an hour blizzard is lashing Lake Superior and has tied up vessel traffic, according to reports received here today.

Three vessels are reported to be missing.

Near zero temperatures have prevailed in Minnesota and the northwest the last few days.

HIGH SCHOOL IN HOT ARGUMENT

Annexation Question Topic of Debate; Audience Is for Negative Side

worked to make Glendale what it is today. These men have worked incessantly, doing all they could for Glendale simply because they had a distinct and personal pride in Glendale. We now have our own City Council, composed of personally interested citizens, men who know Glendale and really have a reason for working to make it better. In its place we would have a body of men, worse than strangers, as our ruling power. It is not reasonable to believe that they would try to further the interests of Glendale.

"Oh, there would be many promises made but in the past the promises of the Los Angeles City Council have not been reliable. Although they may be made with all sincerity and no doubt most of them are, the members are constantly changing and the future members may not take the same attitude as their prerecessors.

There's a Moral Side

"Then consider the moral side of the question. If Glendale were annexed to Los Angeles, the city would be open to pool and billiard halls. While pool and billiards are doubtless harmless entertainments in themselves how many mothers and fathers in this audience would like to have their sons standing around in a pool hall every night? Pool halls would soon create an atmosphere unfit for the boys who will make the next men and citizens. They would attract many loafers of which Glendale at present has remarkably few."

There are no advantages to be gained by annexation in the opinion of Miss Lucille Beach, second speaker on the negative.

"In the first place," she remarked, "taxes would not be decreased enough to warrant such an act. We agree that Los Angeles taxes are lower, but the benefits due from those taxes are scattered over so wide a range of territory that Glendale would not be bettered. The money would be all going out and little would be coming back to us.

Money Stays In Glendale

"Take, for instance, the school tax rate. In Los Angeles it is $1.60; in Glendale, $2.18 — but that money stays in Glendale. It goes to Glendale schools, fills Glendale's educational needs and is not divided among some fifty or sixty schools in Los Angeles.

"The bonded indebtedness of Los Angeles is approximately $87,000,000. Annexation to that city means that a proportion of that amount must be funded from Glendale. No part of Glendale's debts, however, would be funded by Los Angeles. Accordingly, Glendale taxpayers would have a greater burden of taxation than ever before.

"The local tax rate is absolutely under control of you citizens. The City Council must do your bidding. If you people are dissatisfied with the acts of your City Council in the levying of taxes, it is your right, it is your privilege, it is your duty to assume your rights as citizens and rise up in protest.

"Annexation is no remedy. It is like cutting off your nose to spite your face."

Raise In Rates

As proof that Pacific Electric fares would not be reduced, Miss Beach called attention to the fares charged the residents of the Atwater Tract—which has been a part of Los Angeles for some time. She called attention to the fact that Palms, San Pedro, Wilmington, Sawtelle, Van Nuys and Owensmouth, which have been annexed to Los Angeles, still pay telephone tolls based on mileage.

"If Glendale is annexed to Los Angeles," she stated, "the telephone rates that now prevail in Los Angeles would be extended to Glendale. Are you not aware of the fact that Los Angeles telephone rates greatly exceed those of Glendale, in some cases, being more than twice as much?"

Everett Smitts, president of the student body, presided during the debate, which was coached by Miss Mary Gladys Corry, instructor of public speaking.

Eagle Rock's Wishes

"From any knowledge which the Eagle Rock board possesses at the present time I think that the people of Eagle Rock would rather have their junior high school in Eagle Rock," asserted W. H. Dorrance, member of the Eagle Rock Board of Education.

"There seems to be a desire to keep the child at home up to the ninth grade. Quite a number of parents have expressed themselves that way. They feel that the child of the ninth year is young enough to be leaving home to come to Glendale."

"The junior high school idea is here and it is here to stay," remarked Dr. B. H. Smith of La Crescenta, assuring the complete support of his associates on the school board in any movement for the welfare of the children.

Belief that the outlying districts would not lose either educationally or financially in the establishment of a junior high school in Glendale, even if one could not be built immediately by their own districts, was expressed by Richardson D. White.

The seriousness of Tujunga's school situation, on account of the fact that all of its school buildings are temporary and will have to be discarded before long, was outlined briefly by William Morgan, member of the Tujunga Board of Education.

"It seems to me that if we establish a junior high school, it will ultimately be a great benefit to the outlying districts," asserted Dr. P. O. Lucas, member of the local grammar school board of education. "It seems to me that the thing to do is to start in Glendale then branch out to the next most needy city. For my part, I think that this junior high movement is the thing."

A solution to the problem was suggested by Principal George U. Moyse, who recommended the establishment of a junior high school in Glendale, the use of the Central school in Eagle Rock as a junior high as soon as the proposed grammar school has been built in the southern part of that community, and the utilization of a five-acre tract between Sunland and Tujunga for a junior high school.

The meeting adjourned without any definite action.
